What If There Were No U.N.?

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. — It is the alternatives which we must try to keep in mind in these years of fears as we confront the catastrophes brought on by collapsing empires and seek, through diplomacy, to bring into being new approaches short of the most dreadful alternative of all, nuclear war.

Here at this place, which the poets and idealists call "The City of Man," one may honestly pose the question, "What would have happened since 1945 had there been no United Nations?"

The answer is quite plain. The U.N. has saved the world from war. There is, perhaps, a paradox in saying it has not managed to bring peace to the world, but that it has prevented a vast and consuming war. But this is what it has done.

The United Nations is the place where a nation can save face. In time of acute crisis, when all the explosives of national pride, prestige and ambitions are involved, the U.N. provides a way out. The nations can thunder and talk big, but they also can speak humbly and say they will, being members of the U.N., take the matter there.

So long as the U.N. is around, a nation doesn't have to chicken out in a tough situation.

Old Pattern

Every day we see the continued disintegration of an old pattern of power and the appearance of new political and military power centers. In all of this, to be frank, the U.N. offers but a marginal hope.

In just a little more than 15 brief years, we have seen Western Europe's control over Asia and Africa brought almost to an end. Here and there, as in Portuguese Angola, it holds on bloodily and, of course, hopelessly. But, all of Asia has emerged from colonial, or semi-colonial control. The travail of African emergence is before our eyes in the Congo, in Algeria, in Angola and in smaller areas where the first stirrings of independence are seen.

If we look at the status of control as it was when the second war ended, and view it now, we see that the process of disintegration and the growth of new forms have been vast almost beyond comprehension. There has been no slow, coral-like growth. There has been, rather, a great deal of the business of springing full-blown from the forehead of the disturbing god of change.

In many of these moves to independence, violence was a major element. Turbulence and disorder, some of it brutal affronts to the tenets of civilization, were, and are, in the headlines of our papers and in the voices of news commentators. That none of these produced a war into which the powers, large and small, were drawn is almost unbelievable.

Increased Suspicion

This is the more incredible when we consider a corollary to this convulsive change was a tremendous increase in suspicion, hostility and distrust. Radical shifts, revolutionary conditions, and the Wagnerian thunder of ill-prepared states filling the vacuum left by departing imperialisms, did not bring us to nuclear war.

There was always the U.N. No matter how big the statesmen and the generals had talked, they didn't have to take the alternative of the big, hot, consuming nuclear weapons. They didn't have to chicken out. They could say, with perhaps phony piety, they would accept "the presence of the United Nations," or they would bring it before the General Assembly.

It has been, and will continue to be, a sort of cliff-hanging existence. In the past the decline of one power brought yet another to control. We are now trying something new. Communism thinks it can win, without war, by the strength of its Marxist promise to the poor and landless whose expectations are rising faster than reform.

We are, indeed, treading a new and difficult road. We are trying to move toward a form of international security instead of going to war to resolve the challenge of new powers. Mankind has had an evil inheritance of violence. The U.N. is the only alternative.

British Ask Entry Into Trade Bloc

Macmillan Woos Common Market

By PATRICK MASSEY
LONDON (AP)—Authoritative circles were agreed Sunday that Prime Minister Harold Macmillan will take on an historic task Monday—the announcement that Britain has decided to seek an economic merger with its European neighbors in the Common Market.

The decision to apply for membership in the six-nation European Economic Community involves a revolution in British thinking. Down the centuries Britain has never quite thought of herself as a part of Europe. Rather, it has looked outward to its empire and other English-speaking nations for intimate associations.

But there is growing realization that this cory isolation behind the English Channel no longer is tenable now that France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg have emerged into a powerful economic bloc with which the British find it difficult to compete.

The British decision, taken at a Cabinet meeting Thursday, is still an official secret. But Britain consulted its partners in the seven-nation European Free Trade Association—EFTA—at an emergency meeting in Geneva Friday, and some members quickly leaked the loosely-guarded secret that Macmillan intends to seek entry into the rival Common Market.

Diplomats said EFTA will disclose officially its agreement in principle to Britain's action after Macmillan has announced it in the House of Commons Monday.

Macmillan is expected to say that Britain is formally applying for full market membership under article 237 of the Treaty of Rome—the treaty which brought EEC into being in 1957.

But he will emphasize, authoritative sources say, that Britain will not take the final plunge unless modifications are made in the Rome treaty.

The objections which have deterred Britain from joining EEC since its founding are fears for its Commonwealth trade and for its home agriculture.

Adherence to the Rome treaty as it now stands would wreck the long-established trade preference system which Britain now has.

Use of Nuclear Bombs Feared in Berlin War

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Chit Holifield, D-Calif., chairman of the House-Senate Atomic Energy Committee, Sunday raised the possibility that nuclear bombs would be dropped if the Berlin crisis explodes into a shooting war.

At the same time, Gen. Curtis LeMay, Air Force chief of staff, said it was possible the United States might use atomic weapons in a limited war. He advocated using whatever strength was necessary to handle any given situation.

Holifield, appearing on a television program (Youth Wants to Know—CBS) was asked whether he thought any war over Berlin would be confined to conventional weapons. He replied: "It would be very difficult in any future war to withhold using the most effective weapons which each side has."

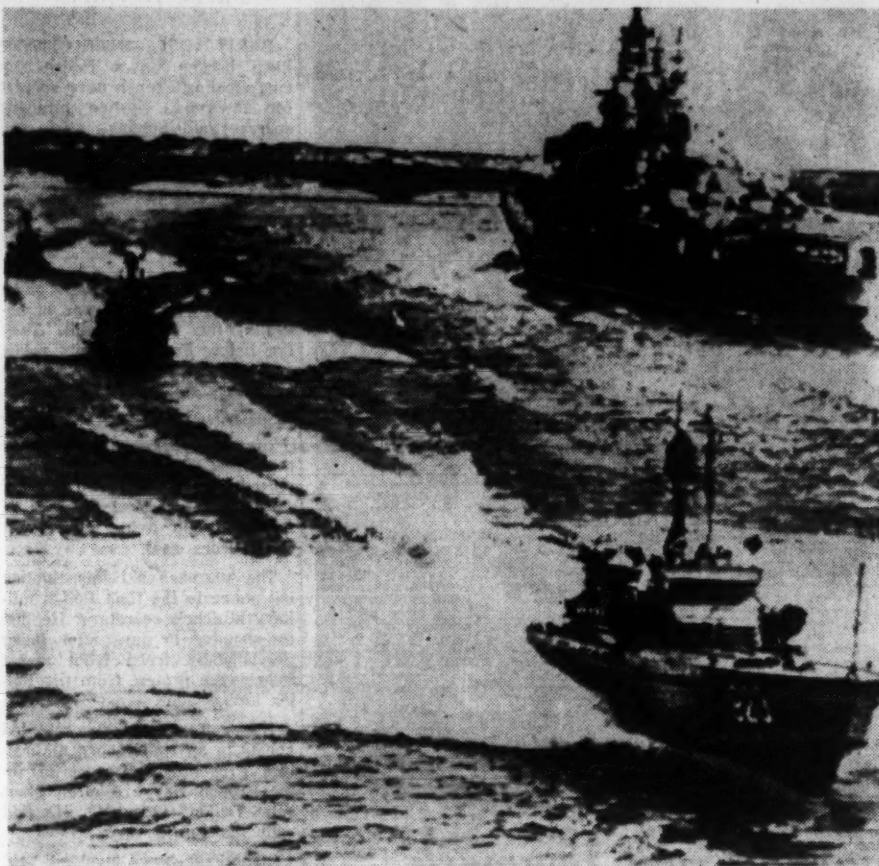

Appearing on another program (All America Wants to Know—CBS), LeMay emphasized that the President alone decides whether this country should use atomic weapons.

But the general said he felt the military services should operate like police forces. A policeman does not shoot every law-

Bride Drowns, 9 Are Rescued

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—A bride of only a few hours, Ima Jean Poynter, 25, drowned early Sunday when an 18-foot cabin cruiser carrying the wedding party capsized on White River here.

Nine other persons were tossed overboard and clung to the side of the cruiser until picked up by two boats nearby. Mrs. Poynter was trapped inside the cabin.

Renewal of Airlift Studied for Berlin

By K. C. THALER

LONDON (UPI)—Allied military planners were reported Sunday to be seriously considering setting up an emergency airlift to Berlin if the Communists should blockade the isolated city.

The Western planners were said to prefer the airlift to any attempted breakthrough toward Berlin by land.

Western military experts are now drawing up various alternative emergency plans to meet any Berlin crisis and all will be examined by U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, British Foreign Minister Lord Home and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville at their conference starting in Paris this Saturday.

GETS STRONG SUPPORT

The crisis plans will then be reviewed with members of the 15-nation NATO alliance at a NATO Council meeting Aug. 8.

Strong support was said to be rallying behind the idea of an airlift, should emergency measures be made necessary by Communist interference with Allied traffic into West Berlin.

It was a massive airlift that permitted the Western Allies to break the 1948-49 blockade of Berlin.

FIELD INADEQUATE

On the negative side, informed sources said, are the present lack of adequate landing facilities for big jet planes in West Berlin and limitations on the quantity of supplies that can be supplied by air for the needs of more than two million Berliners.

Nevertheless, these sources say, important political considerations favor this course in preference to an attempted military breakthrough on the ground. There is this important political consideration in such situations: If shots are fired, who fired the first one?

THE FIRST SHOT

Advocates of the airlift argue that in an attempt to force Western supplies through the roads to Berlin the West might be maneuvered into a position where it has to fire, touching off an explosive situation.

But in an airlift, they point out, unarmed Western planes would be flying supplies to Berlin in the traditional air access corridors to the city. To stop them it would be the Communists — Russians or East Germans — who would have to fire the first shot.

Nail Pierces Mower's Chest

While Wright was mowing his lawn, Saturday, the machine hurled a 3½-inch nail into his chest.

It was removed by Wright's stepson, David Bowman, 18, who heard Wright cry out.

Wright was treated at Broadlawn general hospital and released.

U.S. Jury to Quiz Telfair Witnesses

SAVANNAH — A federal grand jury here Monday begins questioning more than a score of witnesses and sifting through a volume of evidence gathered by the FBI in an investigation of vote fraud in Telfair County.

Hundreds of fraudulent votes were tabulated in the Milan and Temperance precincts of the county in last November's general election.

Eleven poll workers from the two precincts are among 27 persons subpoenaed as witnesses.

A spokesman in the office of U.S. District Attorney Donald Fraser said indictments will be sought if federal voting law violations are established and blame is pin-pointed.

The fact that there were numerous voting irregularities at the two precincts has been well established. The Atlanta Constitution first disclosed the election fraud, including many cases documented by sworn statements and voting records, last December.

A Telfair County grand jury investigated the reports, but said in press statements that while it had discovered irregularities, it did not have evidence to indict.

Missile A-Subs Navy's Backbone, Russians Boast

West Sees None at Sea Show

By STANLEY JOHNSON
MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union staged its big navy show Sunday with a boast that missile-armed atomic submarines now are the backbone of its navy. But none appeared on parade although the Russians say they have more of them than the United States.

Western naval attaches watched the demonstration of Soviet sea power off Leningrad in the celebration of Soviet Navy Day.

The highlight was what the Russians said was a swift, fully automatic launch that could destroy warships with its rockets.

LEAVES WEST COLD

Western observers said they found the launches and missile-carrying destroyers the most interesting, but added they were not particularly impressed.

In all, about 60 warships were on display, ranging from a cruiser on down to small craft. A number of conventional submarines rode at anchor in the Neva River.

The river banks were lined with tens of thousands of spectators on a brilliant summer day.

Deputy Defense Minister Andrei Grechko took the salute from the flagship, the cruiser Kirov. He made the boast of Soviet atomic submarines in a speech opening the show.

TORPEDO MANEUVER

The actual naval parade itself lasted only 10 minutes. Small torpedo boats went through intricate maneuvers. Jet fighters and four jet amphibious planes, seen earlier this month at the Moscow air show, flew overhead.

A Moscow radio announcer, aboard the Kirov, gave a running commentary of the scene.

The announcer said the display

Afro-Asian Bloc Pushes U.N. Assembly on Tunis

By DONALD DILLON

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI)—The Afro-Asian bloc Sunday laid plans to force the calling of a special General Assembly session to deal with the deadlocked French-Tunisian crisis.

At the same time, the United States and other Western delegations hoped to bring France and Tunisia together for direct negotiations on the quarrel that erupted in fighting July 19. The dispute arose over the French naval base at Bizerte, Tunisia, that Tunisia wants removed.

Liberian Ambassador Nathan Barnes issued the call for a special Assembly session Saturday, after the Security Council ended two days of debate without hope of breaking the deadlock.

The Afro-Asian bloc, which meets Monday, was expected to Soviet Plan Called Challenge to U.S.

By LLOYD GARRISON

(Copyright 1961 by The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON — Sen. J. W. Fulbright and other leading senators Sunday viewed the new 20-year Soviet Communist party program as a major challenge to American initiative.

They predicted that the announcement of the program made in Moscow Saturday would have the effect of rallying congressional support behind President John F. Kennedy's new $3,400,000,000 defense request and his controversial foreign aid program.

The Soviet declaration of goals boasted that Russia would surpass the United States in industrial output by 1970, and that world communism would be achieved without a world war.

Sen. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said, "There's no doubt these goals could be achieved if there is no war."

"The big question is the maturity of our response," he said. "The tendency in Congress is to respond to every Soviet threat by our increasing military strength. This won't be enough. We must also develop our economy."

Women Drivers 'Terrifying,' Briton Says After Long Test

LONDON (AP)—A Briton has been following women drivers through the traffic in slapdash fashion.

Holmes followed 110 women motorists for at least two miles each. Of these 110 unsuspecting women drivers, Holmes concluded 84 were totally unsafe, 14 were fit to be on the road but only average drivers, 8 were good and equal to any man at the wheel, and 4 were outstanding and better than most men.

One trouble with women drivers is lack of concentration, Holmes reported.

"Their cars are loaded with children, dogs, shopping, flowers —things requiring the utmost attention to the neglect of safety and common sense," Holmes said.

"Rear mirrors, too, have a fatal magnetism and are obviously regarded as a vanity rather than a safety accessory."

He deplored the "weird and erratic hand signals" of most women drivers.

And who are the best of the bunch? Young girls driving sports cars with "a combination of youthful quick reactions and flexible mechanism," says Holmes.

Castro Seeks To Dim Plan Of Kennedy

By HENRY RAYMONT

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Cuban Premier Fidel Castro is expected to step up his anti-United States campaign this week to try to steal the spotlight from the launching of President John F. Kennedy's alliance for progress program.

Kennedy's plan to speed economic and social progress in Latin America will be submitted for approval to a hemisphere meeting of ministers of economy and finance opening Aug. 5 at Punta del Este, Uruguay.

The President, who regards the plans as the cornerstone of his Latin American policy, has appointed Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon and assistant secretary of state Robert Woodward to represent him at the meeting.

NAGS FOR DEBATE

U. S. officials believed Castro would make every effort during the next few days to provoke Washington into a debate with him in order to draw attention from any positive achievements of the conference.

They predicted, however, that the volatile Cuban leader would encounter the same cold restraint that marked the administration's reaction to the capture of an airplane last week by a Castro sympathizer.

To many state department officials the incident came too close to the opening of the economic conference to be considered an isolated action by a

Cuba's charges Saturday to the United Nations Security Council that the United States would use the airplane incident as an excuse for an armed attack was seen as part of a propaganda build-up on the eve of the meeting.

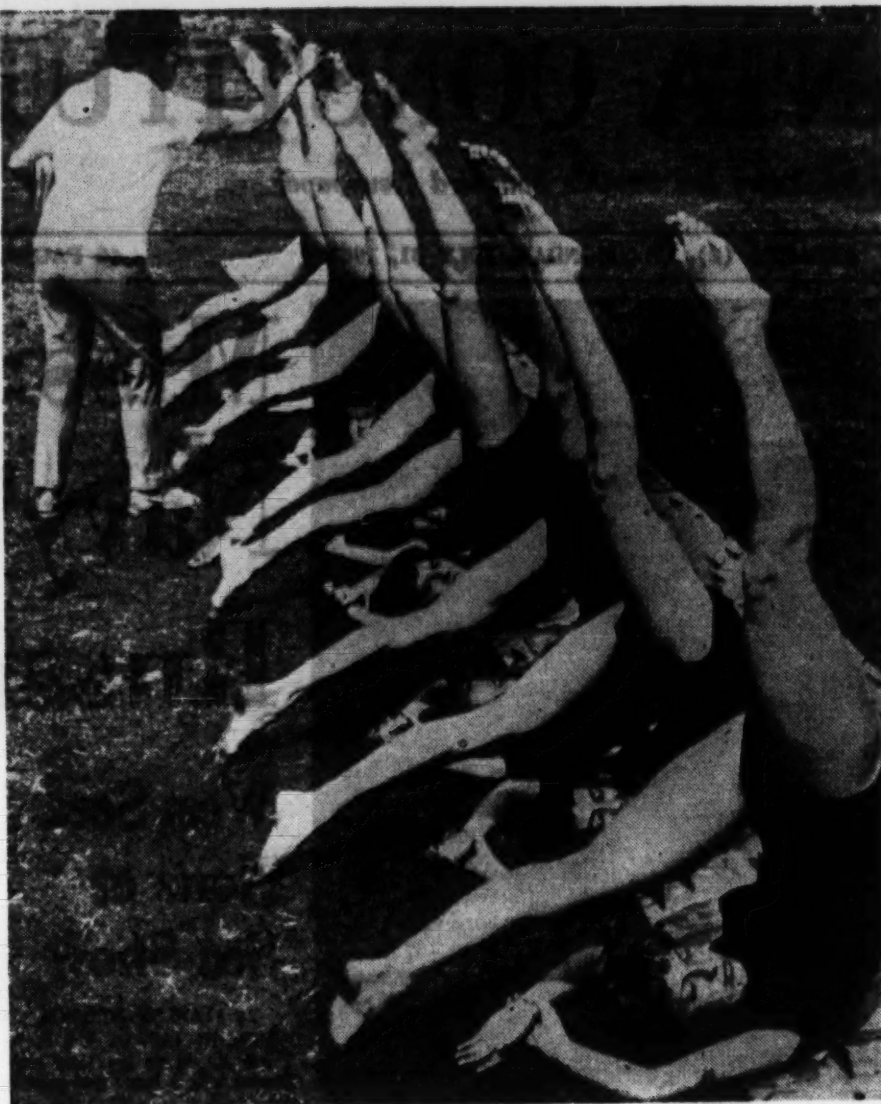

On a radio-TV program Sunday, Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., called for a meeting of the Organization of American States as the first step toward invoking sanctions against Cuba. He said even military sanctions could be invoked by a vote of 15 of the 20 U.S. republics.

Administration sources said the President was determined not to allow his Latin American policy to be deterred from concentrating on the alliance for progress.

WORK THROUGH LATIN

Following the Cuban invasion fiasco, Kennedy and his advisers agreed that the best way to fight Communist expansion from Cuba was to speedily build the economic and social stability of the other Latin American nations.

Accordingly, the Punta del Este meeting is regarded as a major first step in carrying out this policy.

Polish Spies Sentenced By French

Ring Broken, Paris Declares

PARIS (UPI)—Security police have broken up a Polish spy ring stealing French navy secrets for 10 years, justice ministry sources said Sunday.

The sources said the permanent military tribunal has sentenced 10 persons to jail terms ranging from three-year suspended sentences for complicity to life terms for treason.

Five of the accused were given five-year to life sentences in absentia, the sources said. They fled before French security police could arrest them. Two persons were acquitted.

FOREIGNERS SEIZED

The case began in 1950 with the arrest of several persons suspected of being Polish special service agents. Several were of foreign origin living in France, the sources said.

The sources said investigation led police to the then Polish military attaché's secretary. He fled the country 15 days after being provisionally freed from arrest following a protest from the Polish ambassador.

The sources said suspects led agents to an Italian-born naturalized Frenchman who worked in the French Navy research plant near Toulon since 1949. He fled with his family.

Other Frenchmen involved, said the sources, were a former employee of the naval laboratories and of the headquarters of the 1st military region. The sources said he became involved when he gave French secrets to Polish members of his family. He was given five years for treason.

A French engineer was sentenced to 10 years in absentia for treason, sources said.

The sources said the head of the ring was a 40-year-old Austrian-born naturalized Frenchman with a "military revolutionary" record. They said he admitted freely to the tribunal that he worked for a foreign intelligence service.

The sources said the ring had been active in France since 1949. They also said there was a possible line with the 1959 discovery of the body of a captain of the Polish special services in a stonepit in the northwest Paris working class district of Argenteuil.

Police Fire On Tribes In Rabaul

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Police fired on thousands of rioting tribesmen at Rabaul, New Guinea Sunday, Australian Minister for Territories Paul Hasluck announced.

The district commissioner in Rabaul, R. Foldi, said three tribesmen were killed, six seriously wounded and several hundred treated for injuries.

Eight policemen were seriously injured and a police truck destroyed.

Hasluck said the trouble began two days ago when a woman of the Tolai tribe apparently was injured.

Tolais began to march on Rabaul and were met by more than 2,000 Sepik tribesmen.

Police, attempting to separate the two forces, were stoned and beaten with sticks, coconuts and iron bars. The tribesmen waged a running battle through normally quiet better-class streets in Rabaul.

Foldi set up roadblocks and drove with officers into the area with a carload of rifles and ammunition. Shooting then broke out.

Later fire engines drenched the rioters.

Terrorism Spurs Fears In Algeria

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI)—New Moslem rebel terror attacks on French farms increased fears Sunday that the 7-year-old rebellion will flare again because of the collapse of the Lugin peace talks.

The Moslem attacks came as right-wing extremists set off 11 plastic bombs in Algiers and one in the government administration building in the island town of Philippeville. There were no injuries reported.

THREW GRENADE

A few minutes after midnight a Moslem threw a grenade into a carnival at Bone. The blast killed an 8-year-old Moslem girl and injured 70 persons. Police arrested a Moslem suspect.

Another grenade was thrown into a French military police outpost at Bone, seriously wounding a Moslem auxiliary soldier attached to the French army.

The Moslem rebel attacks also included:

1. A barn destroyed by fire early Friday on a farm near Koles, about 30 miles west of here.

FARM BURNS

2. Fire Saturday night that ravaged a large farm in the fertile Mitidja Valley south of Algiers. The flames destroyed outlying wooden barns and buildings, burned 125,000 pounds of grain, destroyed a new threshing machine, a light truck, and two tool sheds.

The guerrillas captured two Moslem farm workers and took them off to the hills. One managed to escape, and made his way back to the farm this morning.

Nasser Is Sending Arms to Tunisia

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI)—Tunisia announced Sunday that the United Arab Republic has agreed to give it "total aid" in the struggle with France over Bizerte and that "military aid is already being sent in" from Cairo.

The announcement was made by Foreign Minister Sadok on his return here Sunday from Cairo talks with U.A.R. President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

It came as the French stepped up an exodus of their civilians from the Bizerte base.

The liner President de Gaulle left Bizerte with 1,300 civilians returning to France. It was the largest single repatriation since the battle of Bizerte broke out between French and Tunisian troops July 19.

Two other French civilian contingents, one numbering 500 and the other 400, had left earlier.

Foreign Minister Mokadem joined other Tunisian officials in predicting that Tunisia would draw closer to the U.A.R. as a result of the Bizerte crisis.

Mokadem said an exchange of Indonesia Revolts Dying Out Except Near Nation's Capital

JAKARTA (UPI)—The fires of rebellion are gradually dying out throughout Indonesia's far-flung islands except near the nation's center and capital in west Java.

Throughout the country rebels have laid down their arms and have surrendered, sometimes in spectacular numbers.

But from west Java's jungle-covered mountain slopes, the fanatic Moslem Darul Islam rebels have stepped up their activities. Slipping through cracks in the wall of army posts around them, Darul Islam rebels have been marauding within 100 miles of the capital city of Djakarta.

According to local military commanders, the rebels have not only increased their hit-and-run attacks, but have also been committing "bestial cruelties and other atrocities."

The situation in west Java is in sharp contrast to the rest of the nation.

Indonesia's latest and most widespread uprising, that of the Sumatra Prii and the north Celebes Peremesta rebels, which broke out in 1958, is slowly coming to a halt.

BOUGHT PLANES

The most serious of Indonesian rebellions was based on regional discontent and was led by figures of national stature, including former Prime Minister Dr. Muhammed Natsir, leader of the now-dissolved Moslem political party Masjumi.

Another leader is Col. Zulkigili Lubis, one-time deputy army chief of staff and considered the brains behind the assassination attempt on President Sukarno in November 1957.

At the height of their power, the rebels were able to buy fighter planes and bombers, hiring foreign pilots.

With the entire nation at stake, the government spared no effort to combat the rebels. After hard-fought and often slow campaigns, government troops finally succeeded in driving the rebels into isolated pockets.

But, aware that long-drawn guerrilla warfare would cost many lives and would drain the nation's finances, the government initiated the "open arms" policy, enabling rebels to give up the fight.

Under this policy, rebels voluntarily surrendering were to be "received with open arms," and promised fair treatment.

Terrorists Hit Again in Tyrol

BOLZANO, Italy (AP)—Terrorists struck again Sunday in the troubled South Tyrol, dynamiting a power line at Selva Dei Mulini.

Two blasts, the first in more than two weeks in this Alpine border region, echoed through the mountain valleys just a few days after Italian police claimed they had broken the main terrorist rings in the area. One steel pylon was knocked down and another damaged by the blasts.

German-speaking residents in the South Tyrol, called Alto Adige by Austrians, are agitating for greater self-rule from Rome.

McCloy Returning; Talks Called Fiery

WASHINGTON (AP)—Special envoy John J. McCloy flew home from Moscow Sunday to give President John F. Kennedy an important first-hand report on his Berlin discussion with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. Some reports describe it as a hot-tempered talk.

McCloy is expected to see Secretary of State Dean Rusk Monday, with a talk with the President to follow, probably on Tuesday.

McCloy is the Kennedy administration's top disarmament policymaker and he has been in Moscow negotiating unsuccessfully for East-West agreement on convening a big new general disarmament conference this summer.

He talked about disarmament when he met Khrushchev at the Premier's Black Sea vacation villa Wednesday and Thursday, but the main subject was Berlin and the future of Germany.

REPORTS SKETCHY
McCloy has sent two preliminary reports to Washington and it was as a result of these very sketchy accounts that the Kennedy administration asked him to hurry home and report personally on Khrushchev's latest Berlin views. These are considered important for two reasons:

1. Rusk is slated to fly to Paris Thursday for a week-long round of consultations with Allied policymakers on the Berlin crisis. His chief talks will be held with Foreign Secretary Lord Home of Britain, French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville, and Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano of West Germany. He wants a detailed report of Khrushchev's latest thinking before he leaves here.

2. McCloy had an extraordinary opportunity to sound out Khrushchev's views on the East-West confrontation over Berlin following President Kennedy's speech to the nation Tuesday night. Kennedy called for a 217,000-man expansion of U.S. armed forces and said in essence that the United States would fight for Berlin if compelled to do so.

McCloy's first report to Washington Friday simply advised that he had talked with Khrushchev about disarmament and about Berlin, but Saturday a more detailed account reached the State department. It was forwarded immediately to Kennedy at his week-end vacation home in Hyannis Port, Mass.

Stanley H. Rittenberg, AFL-CIO research director, said temporary tax-setting authority should be granted to the chief executive to fight recession and inflation. He said he expected support from conservatives as well as liberals for the proposal, one of scores of recommendations made in a recent report by the Commission on Money and Credit. Rittenberg was a member of the commission.

"I think it might be a year or two or three before the Congress gets around to enacting this kind of provision," Rittenberg said in an interview on Mutual's Labor News Conference.

Under the proposal, the President could raise or lower the tax on the first $2,000 of income by five percentage points.

Since the tax rate is now 30 per cent, it could be raised to 35 per cent to reduce spending in a period of inflation or cut to 25 per cent to encourage consumers to buy goods and help end a slump, Rittenberg said.

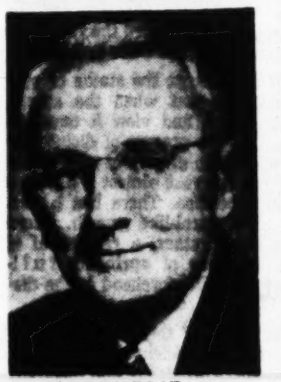

Any such reduction or increase would be effective for a year at most and could be "vetoes" by either house of Congress, he added.

NEW RADAR AT ATLANTA AIRPORT
Byron Matthews, Hubert Brewer Check Console

Atlanta's Airport Installs New Radar

By CHARLES MOORE

A third of a million dollars worth of new radar equipment is being installed at the Atlanta Airport to provide better control of airliners using the facility, which is the nation's seventh busiest.

The new equipment won't be operational before October but it will provide better coverage over a longer range than the existing airport radar.

Engineers of the Texas Instrument Corp., under supervision of Federal Aviation Agency engineers, are installing the radar equipment in the airport's new $18-million terminal building.

The equipment will have double the number of radar scopes—four as against two now in use. In addition, two long-range radar scopes will be installed to tell the air situation for several hundred square miles around Atlanta.

The new airport control radar—to supervise aircraft landing and taking off here—will be able to cover a 60-mile circle around the city. The present radar has a range of about 50 miles — “and you're pushing it,” said Hubert Brewer, FAA section leader.

The new scopes will give a 16-inch picture, as against 10 inches on the present screens—providing a better presentation of the air situation.

VANISH-FREE

And a new feature is a modification to prevent aircraft flying at certain speeds from vanishing from the radar scopes. Under certain conditions, airplanes fade out at a speed of around 145 miles per hour, 290 m.p.h. and 580 m.p.h. on the present radar.

“It usually isn't serious,” said Byron Matthews, FAA section leader, “for you usually can pick up their position from the ‘air wash’ or propellers but sometimes the plane just vanishes briefly from the scope.”

Brewer said the installation of four local control scopes will provide a greater safety factor at the airport. Presently with only two radars, two men have to work from the same scope to control approaching airlines. “It keeps them hopping,” he observed.

INDIVIDUAL SCOPES

In the future, each man will have his own scope.

Matthews said the radar equipment alone costs $300,000. “I don't have any idea how much the accompanying extensive communications system will cost,” he added.

Installation should be completed by September. After a training period to get FAA personnel familiar with it, the new radar will go into operation sometime in October.

Family at Church, Burglar Gets $200

A burglar took advantage of churchgoers Sunday to pick himself up about $200 in cash.

A burglar broke into the home of Paul Scoville of 3522 Piedmont Ave., NE, while the family was at church, ransacked a bedroom and took $200 cash, Patrolman C. O. Anderson said.

Anderson said apparently the culprit first tried to break through the front door by breaking out one of the glass panes but cut himself, and then went around to the back door and entered.

Later Sunday, a burglar entered through the rear door of the home of W. J. Bohler at 2021 Mt. Paran Rd., NW, and stole $143 in household items.

Bohler told Patrolman D. H. Byrd that the burglary was committed while he was shopping for groceries between noon and 2 p.m. Sunday.

The thief took a table fan, an electric toaster, a portable TV set and two radios, Bohler told police.

Georgian Is Sought In Virginia Escape

NATURAL BRIDGE, Va. (UPI)—Federal, state and local authorities Sunday sought two young prisoners—one from Georgia—who fled from the federal prison near here Saturday night.

At large were William R. Julian, 19, of Graysville, Ga., and Lloyd Chafin Lawson, 17, Rockingham, N. C.

The men fled from the prison's Camp Greenleaf, located just off U.S. 11 in the rolling Shenandoah Valley country.

Mitchell Hit In Rug Shift To Georgia

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—A gubernatorial race opponent of James P. Mitchell has charged that the wage policies of the former secretary of labor caused a rug manufacturer to move from New Jersey to Georgia.

The opponent, Democrat Richard J. Hughes, charged Mitchell with “consistent opposition” to a higher minimum wage. Hughes referred to the moving company, A. M. Karagheusian, which is shutting down plants in Freehold and Roselle Park to relocate in Georgia.

He said the average weekly New Jersey wage as of April was $95.87. It was $65.24 in Georgia, he added.

Edwin B. Bachman, manager of the new Karagheusian yarn mill in Statesboro, Ga., said Sunday night in answer to Hughes' charges that wages have nothing to do with the company's moving.

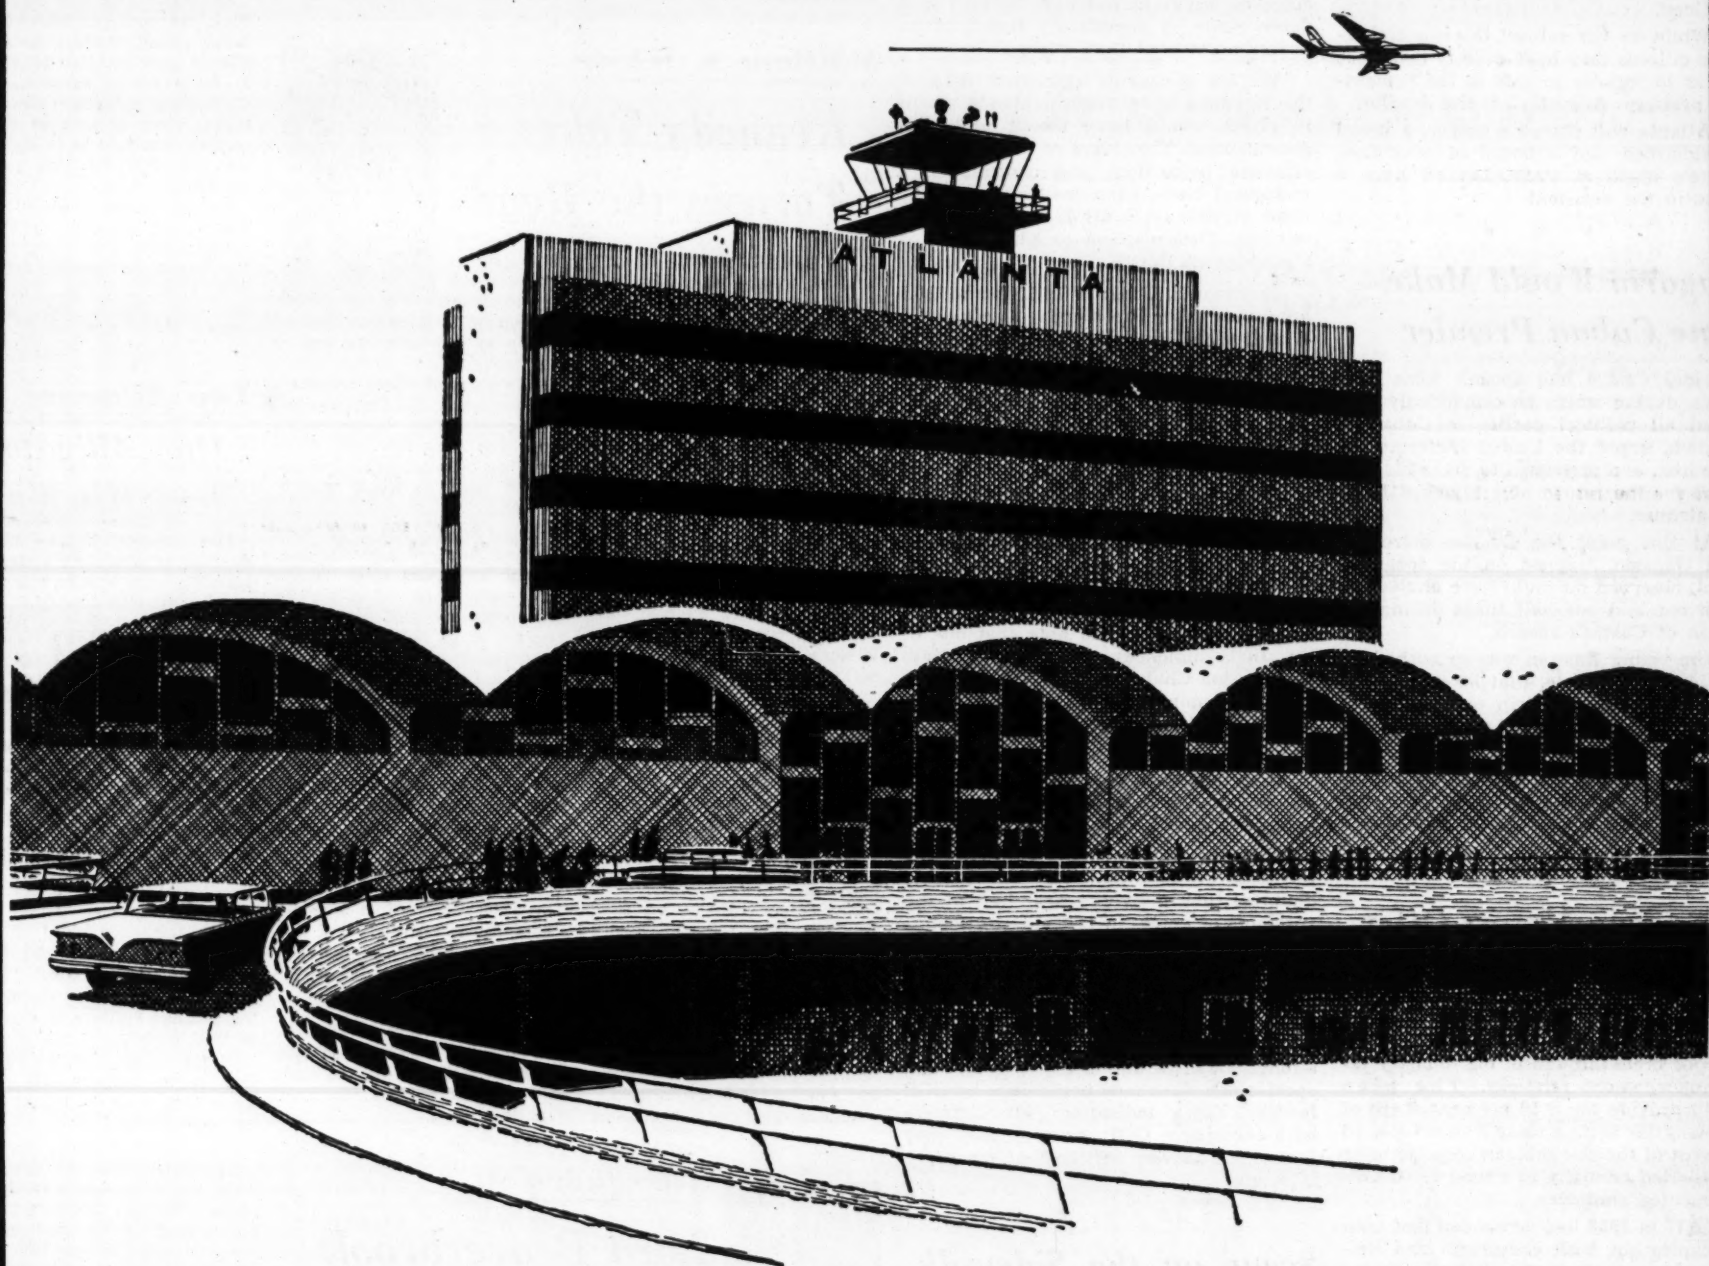

He said, “We are moving for two reasons:

“First of all, our two weaving plants are located in Georgia and North Carolina. Therefore we want our transportation costs reduced.

“Secondly, the future of our country and the growth of our own company indicates we need a lot more production capacity than we can get out of our Roselle Park mill. Our Roselle Park building is surrounded on all sides and we cannot expand it.”

How Will We Pay For These Things?

Candidates for mayor are already "promising" changes in Atlanta's way of doing things that will cost money: Better pay and hours for city employees, municipal advertising for industry, more this and better that, etc.

Fine.

But the candidates are not telling us where the money to pay for these things is to come from. Enlighten us, please. City income tax? City sales tax? City auto licenses? Gross receipts tax? Increased ad valorem tax? Enlighten us, please.

We've a right to know where the candidates propose to raise the $3,036,000 which Comptroller Earl Landers says their promises to city employees alone would cost. How, in short, will a solvent city government be kept solvent?

One candidate, at least, is now on record on the side of fiscal responsibility. M. M. "Muggsy" Smith said on a television program Saturday night he would make no promises now or moves if elected mayor without first considering the taxpayer.

Good!

While on the subject, this is a reminder to citizens they have exactly two more weeks to register to vote in the September primary. August 12 is the deadline.

Atlanta will choose a mayor, a board of aldermen and a board of education. There's much at stake. Let all have a voice in the decision!

Gagarin Would Make Fine Cuban Premier

Fidel Castro had spoken some four hours, during which he offensively out-laid all political parties in Cuba but his own, urged the United States to invade him, and presumed to make his own terms for the return of a hijacked Eastern airliner.

At this point the Russian astronaut Yuri Gagarin, trapped on the speaker's stand, observed he could have circled the earth one and one-half times during the course of Castro's speech.

The young Russian was so bushed by politics, Castro style, that he declined to make a propaganda trip to the Bay of Pigs to see where the American-backed invasion foundered.

Soviet influence in Cuba is disturbing. But we're beginning to think we would prefer Gagarin to Castro as premier down there.

American Motors Offer Is Major Breakthrough

American Motors Corp. last week offered to share profits with its workers in a major breakthrough in big industry labor-management relations. The plan would provide for a 10 per cent share of profits, after setting aside a reserve of 10 per cent of the stockholders' equity, to be contributed annually to a fund for UAW-represented employees.

UAW in 1958 had demanded that auto companies cut both consumers and employees in on their profits. It was rejected outright by the big three of the auto industry and the idea was dropped this year by the union in negotiations. But last December American Motors launched a system of "rebates" to car buyers based on company profits and now makes this revolutionary offer to workers.

The offer itself demonstrates the quiet revolution in labor-management relations in big industry brought on by automation and other factors. Higher hourly wage rates have ceased to be the dominant issue in negotiations. Job security, a share in the benefits of automation and protection from the whims of corporations and the consuming public alike are the new issues and American Motors has acknowledged it. In doing so, this company has set a pattern that others will find difficult to ignore for long.

Look Who's Screaming About the Arms Race!

Reaction in Moscow to President Kennedy's call for a U. S. military buildup is about as expected. The Soviets accuse the President of using the Berlin crisis to accelerate the arms race, a process Khrushchev made inevitable with his increase in his own arms budget and his threats of war.

If the Soviet Union wants to slow down or even end the arms race, the machinery is available for negotiations to that goal. John J. McCloy, the President's disarmament adviser, has been in Russia to confer with Khrushchev himself. It remains to be seen whether he has achieved anything, but prior to his trip a dozen years of negotiating found us no nearer agreement than when it began.

We are no nearer agreement because the Russians have made demands which in effect would have meant unilateral disarmament. They have refused to accept effective inspections and controls on a reciprocal basis, even insisting upon the right of veto on controls over a nuclear test ban. Disarmament to Khrushchev is a propaganda device.

Meanwhile, Congress is losing no time approving the President's requests. Wheels that Khrushchev set in motion are on the move. He has created the Berlin crisis and rejected workable disarmament. He has left us no other course than that which the administration has been forced to adopt.

Republicans in DeKalb Are Still Hard at Work

It is encouraging to note that one of the first audiences chosen by DeKalb Commission Chairman C. O. Emmerich to hear his championing of the county's proposed bond issue was the Young Republicans.

It is indication that GOPs in DeKalb are still at work and that that work is being recognized.

Even though the county voted for Republican electors last November, it is doubtful that anywhere near half of the residents or voters in DeKalb are Republicans. However, the number seems to be growing and local races in the next few years should provide the answer to the question of how strong the party there is.

If the answer is that the party is strong, it will be due to the hard and unspectacular work now being done by GOP leaders. Every indication (Mr. Emmerich's choosing a GOP forum is only one) is that the answer will be that the party is strong.

Get a Load of Lester Maddox

Some early readings can be taken on the race for mayor. But the scraps can't be pieced together into any coherent prediction of a primary winner.

Only one certainty can be offered at this stage: you will register to vote by the end of next week (Aug. 12) or you won't be able to vote for any of the candidates on Sept. 13.

There are five main ones. A sixth man who has announced for the race, Howell Smith, is amiably complaining that this newspaper doesn't consider him a serious candidate, and we can only respond amiably that he is correct.

Two predicted patterns are now becoming clear. Ivan Allen Jr. and Muggsy Smith are splitting the once-united vote that carried retiring Mayor William B. Hartsfield to repeated victories, although each claims publicly that the other is not going to hurt him. Second, the vote growing out of the old anti-Hartsfield nucleus is splintering badly, with Charlie Brown, Jim Aldredge and Lester Maddox chopping into each other.

Brown and Allen were rated the strongest contenders at the start. They are both campaigning well—Allen surprisingly well. Whether they emerge as the top two in the primary, however, and qualify for a man-to-man contest in the probable runoff election may yet depend on the withdrawal, or else the serious weakening, of Smith, Aldredge and/or Maddox. If the present scattering persists, anything can happen in the primary.

Smith and Maddox especially are smiting their chests mightily and declaring somebody made a mistake about who should withdraw. Aldredge is making less noise than the others and apparently hoping to get into the runoff by presenting himself as everybody's dependable man.

The effect of this has been to bring Allen and Smith into head-on collision for the same support, and to spread Brown's positions further than he probably wants to stretch them, for he is being forced toward a pallid make-no-enemies blur at a time when the voters want a sharply delineated fight.

Whether Smith can rally financial backing for a stop-out campaign remains the subject of some speculation. But Maddox appears to have financial backing and his progress in the race is widely conceded to be surprisingly strong.

Maddox projected himself into politics by putting virulent anti-Negro ads in the papers. He is now soft-pedaling his racial extremism publicly on the probable assumption that he has this voting fringe in his pocket already. And he is boldly undertaking to broaden his base now to cut directly into the Charlie Brown vote that could vault him from a confused primary into the runoff and a serious chance at the mayor's chair. Worse things have happened to Atlanta, but not since Sherman.

Kennedy Takes Turn in the Road

WASHINGTON—The Kennedy administration and the country have taken a great turn in the road, and the air in Washington today is clear and bracing. For administration and country, it is now a time of decision and determination. It is goodbye to indecision, to waiting around.

Action has succeeded talk. Deeds have succeeded debate; we are committed to strength-in-honor, to firmness-without-panic, over Berlin and in the cold war generally.

And the whole nation, the President, the people, both political parties and Congress, move now in unison, in calmness, to make ready the increased military power which is to be the iron companion of our resolve to uphold Western rights and Western security, in Berlin and elsewhere.

A country united as it has rarely been stands back of the President as the nonpolitical head and symbol in this matter of the government of the United States—everybody's government, Republican, Democrat, or whatnot.

Kennedy's magnificent and moving address to the country and the tough preparedness program he sends to an eagerly receptive Congress have set the nation's feet on the upward path. We are leaving the valley where lay the fog of too much fear. We are climbing out upon a high plateau. There, undoubted risks lie in wait. But there, too, lies the possibility of a new safety because a people and a nation are now awakened.

All this describes the greatest turn in the road. There are other, if lesser, turns. The President has now chosen that course which those who know him well, whatever their personal political views, felt all along he would take in the end.

Atlanta Fan Wants Georgia To 'Wake Up' And Legalize Horse Racing for Revenue

Atlanta — This is a fact. New York state received $88,000,000 in horse racing revenue for 1960. Florida state received $15,000,000 in horse racing revenue. Paper, Citizens Hit For News Balance

Fort Benning—I noted with interest Mr. Ray's letter stating that in 1912 Ty Cobb's name appeared in more papers than did President Wilson's.

I also observed that a recent Monday's issue devoted 20 columns to sports, while, with war, revolution and coup d'etat threatening or existing in well over a dozen areas of the world, only 6 columns were felt needed to cover international affairs.

It seems a rather sad commentary on the citizenry of the United States when they, through their buying power, force the press of the nation to give more space to a war that supposedly ended nearly a century ago than to one in which men are dying today.

PVT. JORGE F. REYNOLDS.

Democrats Blasted For Socialist Trend

Fort Valley — I would say to Cooper Smith of Waycross that the statesmanlike, constructive and sane articles of Sen. Barry Goldwater are not half as "offensive and antagonistic" to many as the radical columnists who applaud and promote what Garland Byrd and Peter Zack Geer call control by federal bureaucracy and the trend toward socialism in the present Democratic Party.

This Democratic administration has proposed federal regulations of the drug industry and vast controls by the FTC, SEC, CAB and FCC.

Speaker Sam Rayburn led opposition to reorganization and one-man rule of the FCC, which would grant dangerous government control of TV programming, a federal department of urban affairs, a gestapoke federal crime commission, which would encroach upon local and state police affairs; a move to expand the bureaucratic powers of the Budget Bureau and make its director the virtual czar over all resources and public works developments with authority to go over the heads of Cabinet members on policy matters.

Many of these proposals have been opposed by Democrats.

In contrast to the writers who criticize those who advocate less government, Sen. Goldwater's inspiring Independence Day article reminded us anew that our Founding Fathers believed the best governed are the least governed and that the people should support the government rather than the government supporting the people.

Atlantan Supports Aid and Mrs. Law

Atlanta—In your paper of July 26, 1961, Mr. S. W. Holman Sr. (whom I do not know) takes vigorous issue with the position held by Mrs. Fleming Law (whom I have the pleasure of knowing) with respect to foreign aid. Mrs. Law in the past five years, by visiting numerous foreign countries, has had an opportunity to witness at first hand how successful our foreign aid program has been in thwarting the aims of communist aggression. I am willing to bet Mr. Holman has not been out of Fulton County for the last 38 years. I do, however, join with Mr. Holman in encouraging Mrs. Law to run for Congress. The voters of the fifth congressional district would be hard put to find a more capable, well-informed, and astute representative than Mrs. Law.

What Happens Next in Berlin?

What happens next, now that the chips are down? Mr. Khrushchev has said, bluntly, that we've got to get out of Berlin. Mr. Kennedy has said, just as firmly, that we are not going to get out of Berlin. What now for us? And for Mr. Khrushchev?

Our next move is obvious. It is to call up the men and the arms that Mr. Kennedy called for in his speech, and it is a measure of our resolution that the nation as a whole supported his bold stand, and that thousands of young men are flocking to the recruiting stations without waiting to be called.

But it takes time to harden men for war, and to manufacture arms, and to train men in their use.

Will Mr. Khrushchev wait that long? His forces are ready now. Ours are strong, but numerically inferior to his, and it will take time for Mr. Kennedy's demands for more men and more weapons to be translated into combat forces.

There are more than half a million Russian infantrymen in striking distance of Berlin. There are artillery and anti-aircraft and missile divisions. There are also more than 100,000 men in the so-called "People's Army" of East Germany, armed with tanks, jet planes and light artillery. And backing them up are the 150 divisions of infantry and 12,000 fighter planes that make up the mass of the Soviet land forces west of the Ural Mountains.

Against Russia's 20 divisions in East Germany, plus the East German People's Army, the United States can oppose its 5 divisions in West Germany, backed by less than 300,000 men of the West German Army, and by the 17 divisions of NATO forces.

In a general war involving all of Western Europe, this force with its tactical atomic weapons could put up a bitter battle against the Soviets, despite their preponderance in strength.

But Mr. Khrushchev has not threatened Western Europe. He has threatened to drive us out of Berlin. That, at the moment, he could accomplish. With the forces now in East Germany he could cut the land routes, and make it impossible for us to reach the city by air.

The power is his, as of now. He must, in the words of a back yard quarrel, put up or shut up. Two choices face him. To move, or to back down.

In a few months, perhaps a few weeks, we should know his answer. If he moves, it means war. If he waits, we can hope for a few more years of uneasy peace.

Here is a sample: "The Communist Party in Italy is the biggest outside the Iron Curtain. In the last Italian election, Communists polled one-quarter of the total votes.

"If Britain joins the European Axis—the so-called Common Market—she will go into partnership with Italy. In that event, Britain would be only one voice among seven—and Italy will be one of the seven.

"If that situation comes about, then Communism is really on the way."

I LIKE THIS: "When the truth is in your way, you're on the wrong road."

OF ALL THINGS: Who said that, about Hawaii? Mark Twain, in a letter to the N.Y. Tribune, 1873. Close-up

Which Candidates Care Enough?

Forward steps and bad conditions in Georgia's mental health program, reviewed in detail by Reporter Jack Nelson in yesterday's paper, should give the public much to think about. Or have the many who once shuddered so greatly at what they saw a few years ago at the Milledgeville State Hospital now settled back into their apathy? If they have or ever do, the gains made thus far will soon evaporate and Georgia again would be guilty of maintaining no more than an enormous warehouse for mentally ill persons.

Even with strides made thus far, the present situation is still what Dr. William Rotterman, chairman of Gov. Vandiver's Advisory Committee on Mental Institutions, termed it: Instead of being very bad as it was two years ago it is now just poor.

But to the lasting credit of Gov. Vandiver, he has built a foundation. Here's hoping he can expand on it before leaving office and that his successor will be a man of enough wisdom and compassion to build on it like he should.

More money is needed and right now the amount that should be spent on patient care is unavailable. And even though much progress has been made at the Milledgeville State Hospital, especially in its intensive treatment program, the institution is so overcrowded that it may become necessary to end voluntary admissions except in emergencies.

This is all the more reason why Atlanta and other heavily populated centers should do more than they are in the field of mental health. Grady Hospital has space for 72 beds in its psychiatric ward but has only activated an 18-bed unit. Again, lack of money is cited as the reason. Candidates in the forthcoming city primary should tell their listeners what they intend to do about the wasted space at Grady.

The state psychiatric center planned here is essential to bringing Georgia from near the bottom of the national ladder to the top in mental health achievements. If the tentative target date—Jan. 1, 1964—for its completion can be realized earlier, so much the better.

Gov. Vandiver's record on mental health is a monument to his administration. Candidates who aspire to succeed him should let the public know exactly what they intend to do to further the program.—BILL HARRELL.

Attorney for Accused Rioter Thinks He's the Wrong Man

Expression in the eyes of accused "freedom rider" rioter Herschell Acker, 30, a broad-shouldered, slim-hipped, crew-cut man from Rome, Ga., never changed as attorneys argued his extradition to the staunchly segregated state of Alabama. He had beaten a Negro, witnesses claimed, and Bud Gordon, a reporter-photographer, was putting the casual-acting Acker on the Birmingham scene by saying, "I first saw him among a group of eight or ten men beating up a news photographer. I second saw him when he took a camera away from me."

The perturbed photographer went on and said he third saw Acker grabbing another camera, he fourth saw him in a Rome police line-up, and now he was fifth seeing him in Gov. Ernest Vandiver's office.

Acker heard it all. But his eyes showed no emotion. They coldly surveyed the setting in the Capitol. "It is not like he would go out of his way to hurt you," said a reporter. "It is just that if he did, he could do it, and with lack of all emotion. There wouldn't even be a change of expression in those eyes."

Attorney Bobby Lee Cook says it isn't so.

Herschell Acker has never been in any trouble. On May 14, the day violence erupted at the Birmingham Trailways Bus Station, he said he went fishing for awhile at Big Cedar Creek, and, of course, there were other places the accused rioter could have been.

"May 14, I believe," said Cook, "was Mother's Day." Perhaps Herschell paid his mother a call.

"I don't happen to believe that Acker was in Birmingham."

"And I do happen to believe that a person is entitled to good counsel."

"Otherwise, the bar loses courage."

The fact that Gov. Vandiver might order extradition of Acker to Birmingham to face assault with intent to murder charges worried Cook not in the least. (The governor did just that.) "Extradition doesn't mean that anyone is guilty of a crime."

And the hearing didn't hurt Cook's case at all. It was an open forum for the attorney to get the meat of the prosecution's case. He now knows the state of Alabama's star witnesses, and what they will testify. He is confident of a verdict of "not guilty."

"I think they got the wrong man."

But the articulate, aggressive, 34-year-old Summerville attorney doesn't claim to know much about his client. He says he knows nothing of his views on segregation. "I don't know what Acker believes in, or doesn't believe in. He hired me. We represent a lot of people. Arch-conservatives as well as radicals and liberals."

No, the attorney continued, he doesn't know if Herschell Acker is a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

"But then," added Cook for a finish, "I don't know if he is a Mason, a Lion, or, say, a DeMolay."

Whatever, he's a stern-eyed one.

Christian Lead Urged On Race

Special to The Constitution

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N. C. — Methodist Bishop John Owen Smith of Atlanta called upon Christians Sunday night to take the offensive in race relations as an alternate route to the Ku Klux Klan, the "freedom riders," the sit-ins or kneel-ins.

Bishop Smith said if the "good people" don't concern themselves with racial problems, the "bad ones" will take over. He said such problems can be solved with "prayer, common sense and Christianity."

INAUGURATES LECTURES

Today's church people must "face the deeper aspects of justice, freedom, fair play and opportunity" in the South's race problem, Bishop Smith said.

The bishop told the Junaluska Methodist Assembly that the race problem is "deeper than integration" and "good people should be trying to solve it."

Bishop Smith's speech inaugurated an annual series of lectures on major problems of the church in the Southeast. The series was provided by a trust fund from the Rev. Dr. Walt Holcomb of Atlanta and Lake Junaluska, who has been a pastor and evangelist for 67 years.

EVASION DISTURBS

Bishop Smith said concerning race relations that he is disturbed that church people don't want to discuss it, since that usually indicates "we don't want to face it."

"Most of the problems (of desegregation) would be with us even if the Supreme Court had not decided as it has," the bishop told the assembled Methodists.

Since "we don't like the Ku Klux Klan or the freedom riders or sit-ins or kneel-ins," and since the Negroes "can't go lobby in Washington or in the legislatures," the alternate route is to realize that "victories come by taking the offense and not simply putting up a defense," the bishop said.

That offensive for the Christian is to follow a Gospel that is "both personal and social," to quit dreading the problem, to see that changes are inevitable and to take the attitude that "we have a marvelous opportunity in the South," he said.

CITES PROBLEMS

Then he asked, "How Christian or democratic is it if a Negro can't find a decent place to sleep or eat and yet a Japanese or a Mexican can? How much longer can we call it Christian when the Methodist General Conference must meet in some other section of the country because there are some Negro members? How much longer can we wait before the Council of Bishops can meet in the South, can eat and have sleeping quarters in the same place?"

"How Christian is it when a Negro boy must leave some states to get a medical education? How much longer must we wait before merit is the basis for position, and not the old custom of white preference?"

The bishop pointed out that the situation is not all bad, that "the Negro has come a long way, progressing largely with help of the whites," his social and political status has improved and his average income is "way beyond that of persons anywhere else in the world."

But, he added, "we need to keep moving and recognize we're not far enough yet."

NOT TOO LATE

In introducing the lecture series, Dr. Holcomb said, "The Methodist Church should have taken the lead in race relations 25 years ago instead of waiting for statesmen to make it a political problem. It is not too late for the church to make a more aggressive stand."

"Whatever we uproot," he said, "both sides must give and take. In our exploring we have not touched bed rock. The white man is now leaning backward to help the colored man to go forward, but we don't want to lose our balance, and fall backward, and crack our cranium."

Here Are the Things Science Should Seek Repellent For

The world is full of things I can do without and the list grows with every circular that jams my mailbox and nearly every commercial that messes up the continuity of a good television show. The newest commodity I can do without is a push-button bird repellent. Honest, that's what they're making now. A communique in the morning mail advises that aerosol cans now dispense a pleasant foamy substance that you can squirt along roosting and nesting places and "shoo away the most persistent airborne perchers."

Now I don't want to belittle any strides science and industry take toward making us all happy and comfortable but it seems to me they are expending their talents on the wrong pests. In this Golden Age of Repellents it looks like they could come up with some magic formula for banishing something that makes some difference.

They have contrived an easy, push-button, odorless and harmless way of avoiding just about anything in nature that discomfited or discommoded. There are repellents for every known insect, snake, shark and now bird repellents. You can squirt stuff on your best chairs to repel the family cat or dog. You can dispel unpleasant odors by pushing a button. (At least you can cover up the fine, honest scent of cabbage cooking with a sort of ersatz pine or canned spring bouquet scent.)

There is even a whole body of anti-repellents that you can employ or eschew to attract or repel people.

But as far as I'm concerned most of these commodities are piddling achievements. I'll take my chances with the garden insects. Sharks and I have always had a live-and-let-live arrangement. I'm not really hard-pressed to avoid snakes. When I've been black-berrying lately I've noticed a courteous tendency of the snakes to move along and let me have their natural habitat, while on the other hand, I practically never encounter one of them bowling along Thirteenth street.

But there are things a really smart repellent engineer could devote his energies to banishing. Instead of worrying about the aroma of cabbage and honest mildew I'd like to see a button you could push that would spray the air with some magic to clear it of misunderstandings between people. Instead of discouraging cats and dogs from snoozing in the best chairs how much better it would be if you could, with the flick of an aerosol something or other, fix it so any teen-ager or his friends who sprawled there would be immediately energized and would leap up and grab the broom or the lawnmower or the dish towel.

Chiggers are a troublesome infestation and I would welcome any anti-chigger innovation, except that I've already discovered that sulphur in my socks repels them and most of my friends, too. But even worse than chiggers digging into one's hide are worries, fears, bad temper and unkindness. Unfortunately, sulphur in the socks isn't much help here and I think the field is clear for any really inspired repellent expert who is seeking a challenge.

Crisis Bills to Tax Congress This Week

House To Speed Buildup; Senate Tackles Foreign Aid

By PETER BRAESTRUP

(Copyright 1961 by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—Foreign aid, the nation's defense buildup and the Berlin crisis will continue to dominate congressional debate this week.

Senate consideration of the Kennedy administration's long-range foreign aid proposals is scheduled to start early this week. But Senate debate on the aid measure will be delayed by other unfinished business, possibly until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Saturday, the Senate failed to reach a final vote on a $9,000,000 appropriation for the administration's new "man on the moon" space program and 23 independent federal agency budgets. Also bogged down was action on a $5,100,000,000 appropriation for the Labor department and the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

KENNEDY TO PRESS

President John F. Kennedy is expected to continue his personal efforts to push the foreign aid measure at his meeting Tuesday with Democratic congressional leaders.

The chief issue is Kennedy's request for authority to borrow funds from the treasury. In this way, the administration hopes to finance $7,300,000,000 of long-range overseas development loans in the next five years.

ACCEPTED BY PANELS

The measure, in effect, would limit congressional control of foreign aid to outright grants for economic and military assistance. For the current year, the administration is asking $1,690,500,000 for economic programs and $1,885,000,000 for military aid.

Both the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee have accepted the long-term borrowing provision. But it is expected to encounter stiff floor opposition, especially in the House.

There were reports that the administration was willing to compromise, possibly by accepting a three-year loan program, or agreeing to give the appropriations committees of House and Senate veto power over loan commitments in an annual review.

Hamilton Replacing Dulles?

NEW YORK (AP)—Wall Street lawyer Fowler Hamilton will succeed Allen W. Dulles as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Newsweek magazine reported Sunday night.

In an article to appear in its Aug. 7 issue, the magazine says Hamilton, 50, will soon move into a CIA office and will work with Dulles for the rest of the summer before taking over as head of the hush-hush intelligence service in October.

VISIT WITH KENNEDY

The administration's choice of Hamilton followed a private visit with President Kennedy several weeks ago, according to Newsweek. This, in turn, was followed by a secret meeting with Dulles at CIA headquarters, the magazine said.

Hamilton, a Democrat, has been in and out of government service for the past 20 years, notably as chief legal counsel to the Justice Department and as wartime chief of the enemy branch of the Board of Economic Warfare.

FROM KANSAS CITY

A native of Kansas City, he attended the University of Missouri before going to Oxford as a Rhodes scholar. He is now a partner in the New York law firm of Cleary, Gottlieb, Friendly and Hamilton.

Reached at his Greenwich, Conn., home, Hamilton said: "I am not in a position to comment on this matter at this time."

Clarify Reports, Charities Warned

By EMMA HARRISON

(Copyright 1961 by the New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK — The 100,000 voluntary health and welfare agencies in the United States were warned Sunday that they faced the loss of public confidence and increased government controls if they did not clarify their financial reports.

The warning was issued in a report after a two-year study by a

Rio Cheers Yuri After Chilly Hello

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—Soviet Spaceman Yuri Gagarin was cheered by thousands of students and workers Sunday in contrast to his reception on arrival here Saturday.

When Gagarin arrived from Brasilia, only about 500 persons greeted him. Rain and the weekend exodus from the city cut down the crowd.

Sunday, 3,000 persons chanted "Gagarin, Gagarin" as the cosmonaut visited the National Students' Union. Gagarin told the crowd there was a great similarity between Brazil's people and those of the Soviet Union.

Four thousand workers greeted Gagarin at a later visit to the Metal and Electrical Trades Union.

An official reception was held Sunday night by the City of Rio de Janeiro and the State of Guanabara.

committee that included two former secretaries of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The study was financed by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation.

The committee found that "almost no carefully evaluated information is available on how voluntary agencies spend the $1,500,000,000 that the public now entrusts to them each year."

It was found that nearly 25 per cent of agency outlays went for administration, fund-raising and public and professional information.

"The great competition for the charity dollar," the report said, "has resulted in the failure of too many voluntary agencies to present a fair, balanced picture of their activities. Fund-raising costs of both federated and independent agencies are among the more apparent examples of this."

Further, the study found that an analysis of the expenditures of 56 national voluntary agencies showed that the income of $292,000,000 reported by them as received during the last fiscal year did not include their total receipts.

It was found that some agencies did not report the income of local affiliates and that some reported only estimated amounts from fund campaigns.

OWNED BY SECRET POLICE CHIEF

Code in 1864 Book Links Stanton to Lincoln's Death

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—A book purchased four years ago for 25 cents infers that Edwin M. Stanton, Abraham Lincoln's secretary of war, was involved in the Civil War President's assassination, it was disclosed Sunday.

Ray A. Neff, of Gibbsboro, N.J., said the book belonged to Brig. Gen. L. C. Baker, the Union army's chief of secret police.

Neff, writing in the current issue of the Civil War Times, said scribbles on the flyleaf and small dots under letters in the text formed a 250-word coded message.

He said Baker, a Philadelphian who served directly under Stanton, stated in the message that the death of Lincoln was caused by persons "officially close" to him.

Neff said he purchased the book, a copy of Colburn's United Service Magazine, Series II, 1864, while browsing through old volumes at Leary's Book Store here.

He said he and his wife attempted to decipher the code and after getting only a few scattered words in months of part-time work, enlisted the aid of the late Leonard Foursche, a professional cryptographer, of Collingswood, New Jersey.

Neff said the code was deciphered to read: "I am constantly being followed. They are professionals. I cannot fool them."

Then followed an allegorical passage: "In new Rome there walked three men, a Judas, a Brutus and a spy."

"As the fallen man lay dying, Judas came and paid respects to one he hated, and when at last he saw him die, he said, 'Now the ages have him, and the nation have I.'"

Stanton, at Lincoln's bedside, was believed to have said "Now he belongs to the ages."

The coded message by Baker in the bound book continues "but lest one is left to wonder what has happened to the spy, it was I, Lafayette C. Baker, 2-5-68."

Red Denies Spying in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, (AP)—The Soviet commercial attaché here called a rare news conference Saturday to deny published report that he and two other Soviet Embassy officials have been spying in Argentina.

Ivan L. Larchenko said published reports of their alleged espionage activities on a trip to Patagonia were the "result of an ill-intentioned move to hamper trade relations."

UNDER PROBE

The Argentine government disclosed Friday that Larchenko and two administrative employees of the Soviet Embassy — Alexander Abramov and Vladimir Goloulin — had been under investigation for making an unauthorized trip to Patagonia in January.

However, the foreign ministry statement said the investigation showed that while the Soviet diplomats "had violated restrictions regarding their traveling beyond certain limits," their activities at that time "could not be branded as acts of espionage."

The newspaper Correo de la Tarde charged previously that on the trip the Russians took pictures of Argentine coastal features, approached the Argentine-Chilean border and interrogated a number of people.

Larchenko told newsmen, "the only aim of our trip to the southern area was to get acquainted with the sheep-raising and wool brokerage industry in Patagonia."

He said that as a result of the trip they convinced Soviet trading enterprises of the advantage of buying Argentine sheep.

150 Families Flee Kentucky Floods

By the Associated Press

Heavy rains touched off flash floods in parts of southeastern Kentucky Sunday, leaving at least 150 families homeless and causing at least one death.

The rains, which began Saturday night, pelted portions of Johnson and Morgan counties with 3½ inches of rain. Robert Castle of Blaine, Ky., was drowned when he tried to wade through the swollen waters of Blaine Creek.

Highways were closed and some houses pulled from their foundations in the swirling flood waters. State police reported seeing two houses floating down a swollen fork of a creek. At one point the floating houses smashed a swinging bridge.

Elsewhere, hot, muggy air masses dripped warm showers over scattered sections of the nation.

Only the western third of the country enjoyed generally bright skies.

In the North, a front of slightly cooler air stretched all the way from Montana through the northern Great Lakes region into New England.

The front churned up booming thunderstorms and occasional furious winds.

A squall that poured more than half an inch of rain on Chicago's O'Hare Field in 24 minutes also delayed the morning start of the Professional Golf Association national tournament. Slight damage to power lines and trees were reported as the winds were briefly clocked at 47 miles an hour.

The thunderstorm was similar to the one that hit Rochester, Minn., earlier. The 57-mile-an-hour winds were accompanied by showers of small hail and a 1.38 inch dousing of rain.

The rainstorms generally did little to alleviate the heat. After the scattered showers that fell from the Rockies to the Atlantic coast the thermometers steamed back up to the high 80s and the 90s.

Hungary, Ghana Forming Ties

MOSCOW (UPI)—Hungary and Ghana have agreed to establish diplomatic relations, the Soviet News Agency Tass reported Sunday from Budapest.

Tass said bilateral talks ended with the signing of a joint Ghanaian-Hungarian communique.

Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah, according to Tass, was awarded the order of banner of the Hungarian Peoples Republic.

Soviet Plan Called Challenge to U.S.

Should Spur Defense Bills, Stir America, Senators Say

Leader Mike Mansfield echoed Sen. Fulbright's sentiments.

Called Challenge

"If the American people ignore this challenge," he said, "it will prove we are taking too much for granted and not using our capabilities to the full."

In a separate broadcast, Sen. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin, ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, backed the long-range provision, noting that it had been endorsed by Gen. Dwight W. Eisenhower and "other responsible individuals in public life."

Meanwhile the Citizens Committee for International Development, a private group newly mustered in support of the President's proposals, released the names of 257 religious leaders who endorsed the foreign aid measure. Warren Lee Pierson, committee chairman, said the endorsers included 162 Protestants, 65 Catholics and 30 Jewish leaders.

Sees Impact on U.S.

Mansfield asserted the Communist declaration "will have quite an impact on Congress. It could be helpful in bringing home to the American people and their representatives what serious straits we are in."

He asserted that the administration's foreign aid program, with its controversial request for permission to borrow for development loans $8,800,000,000 from the Treasury over a five-year, "will probably pass," and added: "The Soviet's latest challenge should insure its acceptance."

He stressed the need for approving the President's domestic program as well.

Adds to Reasons

Assistant Senate Minority Leader Thomas H. Kuchel reaffirmed Republican backing for the President's $3,400,000,000 defense request, which is certain of passage early this week.

"This latest Communist manifesto supplies all the more reason for the United States to discharge her responsibilities for world leadership," he said.

But he reflected Republican concern that the cost of the administration's domestic program might weaken rather than boost the nation's economy.

Appeal to Others

Sen. Albert Gore, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said, "Even though the Communist program appears to be ugly to us, its appeal to the underprivileged nations must not be underrated."

Soviet affairs experts at the State department agreed with this assessment. They predicted that many aspiring peoples in Africa, Asia, and Latin America would take Soviet promises of a higher standard of living at their face value and view Soviet techniques as better suited to their rapid development than those of the capitalist system.

In the opinion of these experts, most of the main points in the Communist program had been disclosed before.

Keeps Arms Buildup

They noted there appeared to be no change in plans for a Soviet arms buildup, announced several weeks ago by Khrushchev.

They also noted that despite the promises of improved living standards, the program added the important qualification that "complications in the international situation and a necessary increase in the strength of the armed forces can delay realization of the plans for improving the people's material welfare."

One State department official described the domestic goals as "quite conservative." He attributed this to reports of food shortages and a failure on the part of Soviet leadership to attract sufficient labor to work at industrial and agricultural projects in Siberia.

Omit Specific Steps

"They may not be able to step up production of consumer goods right now and their proposals appear to be more serious than was previously imagined," the official said.

It was also pointed out that while the 20-year plan was full of promises there was a conspicuous absence of any specific steps designed to carry them out.

It was felt that few Russians would cheer the party's avowed goal of replacing home cooking with "public catering." Officials here said the proposal was prompted by a need to get more Russian women into the labor force.

Europe's Trade Blocs

Map shows members of European Economic Community (A), or Common Market bloc, in which three nations, England, Denmark and Norway, (B) are scheduled to seek membership. Diagonally shaded areas comprise, in addition to England, Denmark and Norway, the seven-nation European Free Trade Association. Sweden, Switzerland and Austria are expected to apply for a looser association while Finland, an associate member of the EFTA, and Portugal (C), apparently have not decided their position in the scheduled changes. with producers of raw materials in the Commonwealth.

The price support system which underpins the prosperity of British agriculture would have to be modified under the present treaty.

The Common Market has a goal of a common tariff structure and a slight degree of political integration. Under the Stockholm Treaty creating EFTA the members were to dismantle tariff walls between themselves but maintain their separate tariffs toward the outside world.

Among Britain's EFTA partners, Norway and Denmark are expected to follow in applying for full membership in the Common Market. Sweden, Switzerland and Austria are expected to apply for a looser association with the market. Their policies of neutrality seem to bar them from full membership.

Portugal apparently has not yet decided, nor is the position of Finland, an associate member of EFTA, clear.

Negotiation A Step

If Britain's application is accepted, and there seems little doubt it will be, the next step is negotiation on treaty modifications with the Common Market executives in Brussels.

Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium is reported to have brought to Britain last week indications that other EEC leaders are prepared to negotiate on treaty changes.

Macmillan will face some opposition in both Labor and Conservative parties. Certain groups fear British industry and workers will suffer from unrestricted competition with Continental producers.

Others deplore the abrogation of a measure of British political sovereignty as would eventually happen.

Despite these objections, Macmillan is unlikely to have great difficulty in persuading Parliament to accept his decision.

A Bombing Feared in Berlin War

Holifield, LeMay Cite Possibility

a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said if war is thrust upon the United States it might be desirable to "strike Moscow first" rather than try to force a way through a Berlin blockade. He added that he was not advocating a preventive war. He appeared on a radio program (Radio News Conference—News Associates, Inc.).

2. Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said in a radio-TV program (New York State stations) that, while there is a risk of war, "I do not believe we are close to war." He said he doubted that "this will be the issue upon which there will be a war."

U.S. Unprepared on CD

Holifield warned in his broadcast that the United States is totally unprepared for a civil defense standpoint to meet the hazards of a nuclear war.

Without a federal system of underground shelters, he said, "we stand naked and helpless in the face of any kind of a nuclear attack."

Holifield said scientists and Defense department officials have told his House-Senate committee that as things stand now, a nuclear attack would mean 50 to 70 million U.S. casualties.

With underground shelters, he said, this could be reduced to about five million.

Venice Angry Over Motorized Gondola Runs

VENICE, Italy (AP)—Outraged Venetians looked on as Gino Macropodio put-putted down the Grand Canal in a motorized gondola.

Gino said he deliberately guided the monstrosity back and forth Saturday as a protest against the motorboats that rip and roar through the once calm and romantic waterways.

Picturesque gondoliers, whom Venice is proud of, claim they no longer can compete with motorboats and are threatening to pull their gondolas out of the water and park them in San Marco's famed square unless city authorities do something.

65 Stage 4th Wade-In In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP)—Some 65 Negro and white demonstrators staged without incident a fourth consecutive weekend integration "wade-in" at traditionally all-white Rainbow Beach on Chicago's South Side Sunday.

A police detachment of 200 patrolmen under Capt. James P. Hackett stood guard as the integrationists congregated in a group on the sand about 75 yards from the edge of Lake Michigan. A few went swimming, but most of them sat talking on the beach.

Beach guards estimated that about 30,000 bathers to the beach. About 300 of the bathers gathered to watch the "wade-in" demonstrators.

There was no shouting Sunday and "no arrests," commented Capt. Hackett. The three previous weekend "wade-ins" resulted in some antagonism among police, bathers and demonstrators. Several persons were arrested on disorderly conduct charges.

Sunday's demonstration broke up after about three hours.

The demonstration was organized by the NAACP, CORE (Congress on Racial Equality) and PACE (Positive Action Committee for Equality.)

Employment Gains In 135 U.S. Zones

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg announced Sunday that a new national survey of employment shows improvement in 90 per cent (135) of 150 major labor market areas.

Goldberg disclosed results of the June employment survey in a television interview with Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y. (WORTV, New York). Details of the new study will be made public Monday.

Goldberg also:

—Called for passage of the administration's school aid, youth employment and worker retraining bills to help deal with hard-core unemployment that has persisted despite general business recovery.

—Announced that he will call a group of labor experts to Washington Aug. 4 to help draft proposals to amend the Taft-Hartley Law.

—Said the administration is preparing requests for Congress next year to extend coverage of the new minimum wage law passed earlier this year.

—Described the last six months as "the greatest period of labor peace... since world war II" and appealed to both sides in the maritime industry dispute to try to settle their differences before a current Taft-Hartley cooling-off injunction expires.

Goldberg said the new labor market survey was a sign that the administration's recovery program was meeting with some success. But he added that the long-term unemployment problem was still serious.

He said the problem was heightened by a surge of "war babies" into the labor market. These are added to increasing numbers of workers who have lost their jobs in such industries as railroading, coal mining and others where automation has been increased.

included "floating fortresses, ocean-going submarines and submarines of other types, rocket-carrying cruisers and patrol launches."

Long Target Hits

The broadcast asserted the launches were equipped with new missiles which allow the automatic vessels to hit the enemy from a great distance. It gave the impression the launches were operated without a crew.

"The rocket launches can put to sea in any storm and act in conjunction with large rocket-carrying ships and modern aircraft," the announcer said.

At one stage the shipboard microphone was taken over by Rear Adm. Nikolai Lunin, Soviet submarine expert.

"Soviet submarines can operate successfully at enormous distances from their homeland and spend a long time on distant cruises," he said.

"In brief, we have all the equipment so that, if anyone dares to unleash war against our peace-loving country, they will be driven back and routed, no matter on which sea or ocean they may hide."

Soviet Program Puts Mao in Shade

draft program to replace the outdated 1919 program, although he had promised a new program at the 18th congress in March, 1959, and at the 19th in October, 1962.

At the 20th congress in February, 1956, when the policy of deStalinization was introduced by Khrushchev, a resolution was adopted authorizing the central committee to draft a new program. The names of the drafting commission, which was under Khrushchev's guidance, have never been revealed.

The appearance of the draft program, which embodies much of Khrushchev's thinking, put the Soviet party secretary on a par with Chairman Mao in an important respect.

When Khrushchev became the first secretary in September, 1953, the Chinese Communist leader already had contributed a body of original thought to Communist ideological literature. He had carried out a successful revolution based on the peasantry rather than in the classic manner through the urban proletariat.

Didn't Trickle

Mac did not make his obeisances when Khrushchev, the newcomer, took control of the Communist party. Doctrinal differences came into the open as Khrushchev shed Stalinist ideological conceptions.

The draft program incorporates the ideological compromises reached by the Soviet and Chinese Communist parties in November at the meeting here of the 81 Communist parties.

But it was noted that the emphasis throughout is on Khrushchev's point of view. The document stresses "peaceful co-existence" with the United States and other Western countries as the best means of obtaining world communism. There is much less militancy in the program than Peiping has opted for in the past.

Khrushchev now has made his contribution to Communist literature and at a time when economic difficulties are compelling Mao to do some overhauling of his own ideological premises.

Father Figure

The appearance of the draft program will add to the characteristics of a father figure that Khrushchev has taken on for the Soviet people.

Khrushchev nowadays is quoted liberally on every subject from the construction of homes to the digestion of horsemeat. When the Soviet Union on June 22 marked the 20th anniversary of Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union, Khrushchev appeared at the Kremlin in uniform and was hailed as the victor in World War II.

There is being shown in Soviet cinemas a lengthy documentary on the career of Khrushchev entitled "Our Nikita Sergeevich."

According to the draft party program, Khrushchev remains opposed, however, to the development of any "cult of personality." Stalin was denounced for committing this sin by Khrushchev at the 20th party congress.

Party's Role Decreases

"The personality cult in all violations of collective leadership of inner party democracy and of socialist justice which was connected with it are incompatible with the Leninist principles of party life," the draft program declared.

"The personality cult leads to a decrease of the party's role and of the people's role; it hinders development of the ideological life of the party and the creative activity of the working people."

The draft program also undertakes to reinvestigate periodically the party through the replacement of its officials at every echelon of leadership.

Replace A Fourth

The draft program said there would be introduced the system whereby at least one-fourth of the membership of the central committee and its policy-making presidium would be replaced at each election.

Elections of these top organs of the party take place at party congresses, which are supposed to meet every four years.

The draft program said that members of the presidium would be elected no more than three successive times. It added this escape clause, however:

"Some leaders of the party because of their recognized prestige, high political organizing ability and other qualities may be elected to the leading organs for a longer term. In this case the candidate is to be considered elected on condition that no less than three-fourths of the votes in a secret ballot are awarded him."

"Triangle difficulty leads to shooting of neighbor."—
News item.

Since men are dumb and girls are cute... The Orchard of Forbidden-fruit... Is always an attractive place... And that is why men go "off-base"... Or, jump some other fellow's claim... When all the fruit is much the same... Or, climb some other fellow's fence... Which doesn't make a bit of sense.

The fruit may have a lovely skin... But who can tell what is within?... The same old fruit, the seed and core... That Adam learned about before... His destiny was sealed and fixed... (And though our metaphor is mixed)... It is our hope, you get the point... Before your neck gets out of joint... Before the owner tries to shoot... The one who came to steal his fruit.

It is no business of ours... But robbing someone's orchard sours... The disposition of the one... Who has possession of the gun... Ah, it's a frightening thing to be... Caught in somebody's apple-tree.

BRIDGE

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ
Q. 1—As South you hold:
♠ J 9 6 4 3 ♥ A 6 ♦ 9 5 2 ♣ K Q 7
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid?
A.—You have an average hand in high cards (10 points) and a five-card suit, which makes game prospects very bright opposite a takeout double. The method of conveying this bit of information is to bid one more than necessary. The proper call is two spades.

Q. 2—Partner opens with three no trump and you hold:
♠ A 5 ♥ 7 6 5 ♦ 10 9 4 ♣ K 10 7 5
What do you bid?
A.—On a basis of simple arithmetic, you should contract for a small slam in no trump. You have a count of nine, and partner has a minimum of 25.

Q. 3—As South you hold:
♠ 7 6 3 ♥ A Q 7 5 3 ♦ Q 10 6 3 ♣ 5
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♦ 2 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid?
A.—Pass. There can be no bright prospects for game when partner fails to make a take-out double. It is extremely dangerous to experiment with a suit that is higher in rank than partner's suit. If he does not like hearts, he may have to return to three clubs, and then the fun might start flying.

Q. 4—As South you hold:
♠ K 10 6 ♥ A K 10 7 5 ♦ K J 9 6 ♣ A
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—With this hand we would insist upon reaching a game contract despite partner's mild response. We therefore would rebid three diamonds, a jump shift forcing to game. If partner returns to three hearts we would bid four. If he bids three no trump we would relax and, if by some chance he should raise diamonds, we should have a reasonable play for game in that suit.

Q. 5—As South you hold:
♠ A 6 5 4 ♥ A ♦ A 8 4 3 ♣ A 8 6 5
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid?
A.—This hand will very likely produce a slam, and a jump shift is clearly indicated. The suggested call is three clubs. This is much preferable to two spades, for in making temporizing bids it is preferable not to take liberties with weak major suits.

Q. 6—As South you hold:
♠ A 7 3 ♥ 9 7 6 4 2 ♣ A K 7 5 3
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid?
A.—Two clubs. This is preferable to a response of two diamonds, for it is not our purpose to bid this hand as a diamond-club two suiter. It is highly improbable that diamonds could be the best contract unless partner bids that suit himself.

Q. 7—As South you hold:
♠ A 2 ♥ 5 3 ♦ J 9 8 7 6 4 ♣ A K 2
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—We do not recommend a bid of three no trump. Partner's hand is highly unbalanced. Your tricks are very quick, and your diamond suit does not appear to be readily establishable for purposes of no trump. We therefore recommend a raise to four hearts. Remember that two trumps constitute adequate support when partner has made a jump rebid in the suit.

OLYMPIC FIGHTS TAKEOVER

Ghana and Togo
Headed for War?By MIKE MAHONEY
Constitution Correspondent

ACCRA, Ghana—There are at least two contemporary African leaders who would agree wholeheartedly with the opinion of Hesiod, the ancient sage, that "A bad neighbor is as great a misfortune as a good one is a great blessing."

One is Ghana's President Kwame Nkrumah. The other is Togo's President Sylvanus Olympio. That the two are neighbors is a geographical fact. That they are also bad neighbors, and growing worse, is becoming more obvious and more alarming with each passing day.

NKRUMAH SEEKS UNITY

The basic cause of dissension between them is the fact that Nkrumah would like to see Togo united with Ghana in one nation, while Olympio wishes to preserve his country as a separate and independent republic. And Nkrumah, in attempting to achieve his goal of Ghana-Togo unity, naturally has been meeting stiff resistance from the proud and tough Togolese leader.

Togo, a long, thin, West Virginia-size country with a population of approximately two million, has been overshadowed by her bigger (Olympio-size, seven million population) western neighbor, Ghana, ever since she became independent on April 27, 1960. Nkrumah, who led his country to freedom three years earlier (March 6, 1947), adopted a somewhat patronizing, big-brother attitude toward his smaller and more impoverished neighbor, which has not helped to promote friendly relations.

TRIBE SPLIT

As an added irritant between the two countries is the problem of the Ewe tribe (pronounced "Evvie"), half of whose nearly one million members lives in Togo, the other half in Ghana. (This is a good example of one of the many headaches caused by the artificial boundaries which were carved on Africa by the former colonial powers.)

Both Nkrumah and Olympio agree that it is a tragedy for the Ewes to be split between two countries, and that it would be a good thing for them to be a new one composed of Ghana and Togo. But Olympio, feeling that Togo would emerge as much the lesser of the two partners, balks at this idea.

DETERIORATE RAPIDLY

Something else that has long-ranched Olympio is the fact that former British Togoland, which was wedged between Ghana (then the Gold Coast) and French Togoland (now the Republic of Togo), voted in a U.N.-supervised plebiscite in 1956 to join with Ghana when the latter gained her independence. (This area is now known as the Volta Region of Ghana.) If British Togoland had voted instead to join French Togoland, the Republic of Togo today would be almost twice its present size.

Although relations between Ghana and Togo have always been somewhat strained, the last few months have witnessed their rapid deterioration. Some observers believe that if the present trend continues unchecked, it easily could lead to an outbreak of armed violence between these two West African neighbors.

PROPAGANDA PUSHED

Currently the Ghana government is waging a high-powered propaganda campaign by press and radio on behalf of the "Ghana-Togo Union Movement." Efforts also are being made to persuade the Ewe tribesmen who live in Ghana to demonstrate actively their solidarity and desire for unity with their brothers who live across the border in Togo.

There can be no doubt that this war-of-nerves is having a provocative effect on President Sylvanus Olympio. Soon after he returned from a recent trip to Europe (where he sought, and obtained, promises of financial and material aid from several Western nations—as well as from Yugoslavia), the Togo leader broadcast a stinging attack over Radio Lome against Ghana.

"On my return to Lome (capital of Togo)," he declared, "I was able to note that our relations with Ghana have become less and less satisfactory."

ARMS IMPORTED

"It seems that since the discovery in Togo of automatic arms (44 Czech-made pistols and 2,616 rounds of ammunition) which were imported by members of the opposition, and since the principal organizer of this smuggling of arms has fled to Ghana, one can easily see some concern in governmental circles in Ghana. Can one find the answer in the old dictum that attack is the best form of defense?"

As if in answer to his own question, he then belligerently declared that "The former territory of British Togoland (now Ghana's Volta Region) belongs incontestably to the Togo Republic."

"Since then, we have seen that Ghana, not satisfied with the part of Togo integrated into her territory, has made clear her ambition to annex the part of Togo which remains to us."

END INDEFINITE

In reply to Olympio's charge concerning former British Togoland, the Ghana government stated that it was a "gross misrepresentation of the facts of history," pointing out that in the plebiscite of May 9, 1956, two-thirds of the residents of British Togoland voted to join Ghana when the latter became independent.

As to his intimation that Ghana was somehow involved in the smuggling of arms to the political opposition in Togo, the government stated that it was "not aware of the presence in Ghana of any citizen of the Republic of Togo who had been involved in the importation of arms in Togo."

And so the battle rages and no one knows where or how it is going to end.

Perhaps peace would prevail if only UN members Ghana and Togo would live up to the ideals expressed in the UN charter: "And for these ends to practice tolerance and live together in peace with one another as good neighbors..."

Antabuse Not a Cure,
But Will Cut Drinking

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My husband is a heavy drinker. For three months he has been out of work and is drinking heavier. I've asked him to go to Alcoholics Anonymous but he refuses. Now I've asked him if I get some medicine will he take it, and he says yes. Would you spell the name of some pills I can get from a doctor or druggist?—E. T.

There is no medicine that will cure alcoholism. The closest anyone has come is a drug called antabuse, which has the curious faculty of making a person sick as a dog if he drinks.

It's a powerful drug and has to be used carefully. Hence the law permits you to get it only on prescription and under a doctor's care.

Many cities have alcohol clinics, which can give you further advice. You probably know very well by now that a chronic drinker can be very cagey about concealing the amount he drinks, or hiding a bottle somewhere, or getting hold of some money for drinks when the money should go for something else.

Well, experience teaches us that alcoholics may agree to take antabuse. However they become quite adroit at pretending to take it, but not really doing so. Or they find excuses for not taking it.

It's true that a great many alcoholics need help from someone else (doctor, friend, wife, AA, pastor or whoever) to lick the habit.

But one thing they must do for themselves is to have a genuine desire to quit drinking. They simply cannot expect any other person, or any pill or treatment to do it all. They must want to succeed.

A question has arisen between my neighbor and myself: Why does some women's skin show stretch marks and others not? She just had her third baby and showed me her stretch marks on her stomach and breast. Also she told me she had only four stitches with this one.

I have five children, aged from 1 to 7, and have never had any stretch marks or stitches. Our physical differences are these: I am an even 5 feet and weigh 98 pounds; she is 5-3 and weighs 110. During pregnancy we each gained only 16 pounds. Also I do not do specific exercises and she does. Please explain if you can.—Mrs. M. S.

I can't. All I know is that some skins stretch better than others. Gaining too much weight in pregnancy certainly increases the intensity of stretch marks but 16 pounds isn't excessive. I doubt whether exercise has much if anything to do with stretch marks. In short, all I can say is that some skins do and some don't.

My doctor prescribed phenobarbital because I was very nervous but then I was told the pills make you mean, etc. so I haven't taken any for six or eight weeks. I am very nervous and feel crabby. Should I take them again?—M. C.

Phenobarbital should be taken in suitably small doses but it does not "make you mean." After your recent experience, don't think your doctor knew what he was doing better than whoever it was who gave you that misinformation.

Mr. Molner regrets he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are used in his column whenever possible.

Zeigler Wins
Famous Seal
Of Approval

The Zeigler Facial Exerciser, an easy-to-operate unit designed to firm and tone facial muscles in the privacy of the home, and recently introduced in Atlanta by Beauty Headquarters, has been granted the coveted McCall's Seal of Approval by McCall's Magazine.

As with other products, the Zeigler was tested in McCall's test rooms for the qualities and features important to the consumer. "That's why," according to McCall's, "after we have tested a product in the laboratory and in practical use—and like it—we believe you will like it, too."

To quote further from the Laboratory and Use-Tested report released by McCall's: "Our Users' Panel obtained gratifying results from using this passive exerciser faithfully for several months. The gentle, controlled electronic stimulation of lazy facial muscles, lessened fine lines and wrinkles. A definite lift could be seen in sagging, mature contours. Trained consultants give private instruction to assure proper use and maximum benefits. Laboratory test proved the exerciser is electrically safe."

Listed features that McCall's especially liked were: (1) "Brighter, fresher appearance—Stimulated surface circulation improves skin texture and colors." (2) Firmer Facial Contours—Regular, gentle exercise gives a lift to sagging muscles. (3) Softens Expression Lines—Fine lines and wrinkles appear smoother, less obvious. (4) Convenient and Easy to Use—Small compact case takes up little room; directions are clear and simple.

Eighteen minutes of spot application to each side of the face nightly—until a definite improvement is seen—is the procedure recommended by Brownie Taylor and Mary Eubanks, who operate Beauty Headquarters. Their job is to see that the Zeigler is properly used, and they are available on a consultation basis as long as you own a Zeigler.

Incidentally, Eubanks and Taylor do not limit their services to facial improvement alone. "Home Beauty Care"—from Head to Toe—is the basis of their business. As

Summer Sale
On at Ruben's
Furriers

You won't find fancy salon atmosphere at Ruben's Furriers in the Grand Theater Building, nor is a big impressive staff one of its features. The "staff" is Ruben himself, and like the European craftsman that he is, he seems completely oblivious to his surroundings as he bends over his sewing machine or applies fine hand touches to a gorgeous hunk of fur.

Currently you'll find Ruben making like a big game hunter as he "brings back alive" multitudinous old fur coats that find their way into fashionable jackets, capes and stoles. (Summer sale prices are in effect at this well-known establishment. If you act now you can look forward to a glamorous fall. You can also expect the savings in low overhead to make the going price even more attractive.)

Max Ruben has been in the business of furs all of his working life, beginning of which goes back to Poland and his twelfth year. Since he hails from three generations of furriers, he cannot really imagine working at another trade. "Only in the old country do you learn all phases of the trade," he states. "And only when you know how to tan, cure and dye can you create fur fashions that are handsome and durable."

You can also have your furs stored at Ruben's for the summer and rest assured that they will receive the best in care. Phone JA. 2-8751 or drop by the Grand Theater Building.

Bermuda Shorts and Sweet Music Please Diners at The Rochdale

"Bring the whole family... wear your most comfortable clothes... sit back and enjoy exceptionally good food in cool, relaxed (but eye-tempting) surroundings" is the not-so-secret lure of The Rochdale at the Suburban Plaza Shopping Center in Decatur.

It may well be that Charles Scherer, president and manager, used to be one of these men who objected to "eating out," because it meant "dressing up." At any rate, there is no stuffed-shirt-and-black-tie formality about the beautiful Rochdale, nor are the man-sized slices of roast beef (a specialty of the house) in the least bit prissy.

But just as you decide that this is, indeed, home-away-from-home atmosphere—too good to be true—The Rochdale wows you with still another pleasant surprise: soothing music by Bill Fish at the Hammond organ—inspiring, good-for-the-digestion tunes that inevitably make you linger for just one more cup of coffee.

Moderate prices, courteous service and quality food are other factors that have contributed to The Rochdale's popularity. In addition to roast beef sliced to order, char-broiled chopped steak is a Rochdale specialty. Delectable pastries come steaming forth from the cafeteria's own bakery.

Lynda Teed and Jackie Cook put in a couple of requests to Bill Fish at The Rochdale, a classy-cafe-teria-with-a-casual air at the Suburban Plaza Shopping Center. The Rochdale operates on a "come-as-you-are" basis, Bermuda shorts and slacks included.

and crisp, beautifully garnished salads, displayed on a revolving salad unit, often rate as the Piece de Resistance of many an excellent meal.

The Rochdale is open seven days a week on the following schedule: Weekdays—8 a.m. to 11, breakfast and coffee break; 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., luncheon; 2:30 to 5, tea time and coffee break; 5 to 8, dinner. Sunday dinner begins at 11 a.m. and is served continuously until 8. Bill Fish provides music each evening, from 6 until 8, and on Sunday from 12 to 3.

The Rochdale is located on the lower level of the Suburban Plaza Shopping Center, 2639 North Decatur Rd., facing the Lawrenceville Highway. To make reservations for private parties, phone the cafeteria at 377-4510.

Atlanta Roofing Supply Does Complete Job

"Two sidings for the price of one," is the offer of Atlanta Roofing Supply Co., a well-known and long-established company that combines aluminum siding with fiberboard to achieve the "ultimate" in weather resistance.

Old and new homes, all sizes and types, are getting this weather-resisting face-lifting with aluminum, the modern siding. They come out looking as attractive—often more so—as any house on the block, and what's more they STAY that way, too. Aluminum siding applied by Atlanta Roofing Supply never loses its sparkle... never dulls... never ages. It can be washed sparkling clean with the swish of a garden hose.

For many years Atlanta Roofing Supply has made a specialty of home remodeling methods that do not throw a family budget into a disastrous tail spin. They now offer aluminum siding as the best possible answer to a multitude of home improvement problems.

Is your home hot in summer, cold in winter, and do you have trouble achieving even distribution of heat? Fiberboard-backed aluminum siding applied by Atlanta Roofing Supply retains furnace heat indoors, and, in summer, reflects the burning rays of the sun. You stay degrees cooler, even in the hottest weather.

Aluminum siding, the modern house covering, was applied to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Coggins, 1742 Flagler Ave., NE. Long-lasting and beautiful, aluminum siding requires practically no upkeep.

The combination is designed for money-saving application and practically no upkeep cost.

Sometimes bothered by neighborhood noises? Laminated, factory-joined aluminum siding at Atlanta Roofing Supply creates a sound barrier that reduces outside noises to a whisper.

Best of all, if you're faced with the repairing the exterior of your home every year or so, aluminum-plus-fiberboard is designed to last as long as the house stands. It's colorized with fire-baked enamel in your choice of soft-toned color to stay beautiful always. It will not crack, chip or peel.

Turn your home improvement problems over to Atlanta Roofing Supply with confidence. The company not only provides the necessary materials at reasonable cost,

I wish my measles had come from Rich's

... instead of from that stupid girl next door! I'd take them back so quick they'd think it was Momma on the day after Christmas. Why I wouldn't even take time to ride the escalators I'd be in such a hurry! Straight up to the man in charge of the measles department I'd go, and I'd say: "Now you listen to me, stranger, I happen to be the Great Zorro and I got these measles here and I'm returning them, see. Now what are you gonna do about it?" And, being as how it's Rich's, he'd probably smile and say: "Why certainly, sir. At Rich's the customer makes his own adjustment." "Okay," I'd say, "that's better. Now get out there and get me a snake whip and a television set and a bicycle with handbrakes and a model plane with a real engine and a couple pounds of pecan fudge and be quick about it!" And he'd do it, too ... and that's just the way they are at Rich's.

ATLANTA BORN . . . ATLANTA OWNED . . . ATLANTA MANAGED

Doris Lockerman

Yes, They'll All Be Called to Duty

The draft will be trebled. Two hundred and fifty thousand reservists are ready. The National Guard has been alerted.

Suddenly, everyone has a boy to think about.

The quiet one, looking older than his years, a contradiction of simplicity and complication, serene on the surface, but easily stirred by the winds of worry or anger brushing around him—he will be called.

The lonely one, artistic, lean, removed, married only last month in a sudden flowering of ardor for the first girl he ever loved and anxious now about school and responsibility—he will be called.

The slow one who never quite made it with the quiz kids, whose laugh was always delayed that split-second too long, signalling the clever that he was not in their fast, flip league—he will be called.

The fat kid, his square hand always stuffing a cheeseburger or a cookie into his mouth, the one who sneaks bread and mayonnaise sandwiches under his sheet at night to feed some other, deeper hunger—he will go.

The wise guy, the mama's boy, the honor graduate, the young rebel, the ballad singer, the bongo drummer, the athlete, the acolyte who remembers to write thank-you notes and closes them with accusing grace, "God be with you"—they will all go.

They will be called, and it will not surprise them. Today's young men have lived since their youth in the shadow of great threat. They have known all along that their lives must be molded to fit the changing demands of international diplomacy.

And if they have been aimless, if they have been seen as docile or beat or disengaged with the idealism that flamed in the hearts of their elders, it has been because they have sensed the immensity of the future hovering like a foreboding cloud never too far away.

Their parents have known it too. And if they have not talked of it much, it has been because it is the business of parents to protect the golden innocence of youth to whatever degree it can be guarded.

But now the facts will be faced.

A million mothers will wince with anguish and protest, "I just can't stand it," catch the right set of shoulder of their husbands and quickly add, "I mean—we will stand it somehow. This too will pass. It will be over, and we can go on as before."

But nothing will go on as before. Life may be better or worse but it will never be the same.

Those who send the quiet, lonely, slow, fat, wise sons want to hear no more self-righteous, nettled name-caller's exclusive virtue.

We will be giving—again—the best we have and can do no more.

HERE'S WHAT THEY'RE SAYING IN McCALL'S:

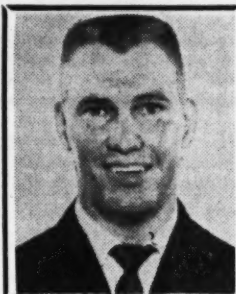

"I think a teacher's salary should begin at least one third above that of an industrial worker."

LOOKS AS IF BOW FELL OFF
Caroline Kennedy Coif Is Newest Rage

Caroline Upstages Mother As Hair-Style Pace-Setter

PARIS (WNS) — Last season it was the Jackie hair-do for chic Frenchwomen, but now it's to be the Caroline Kennedy coiffure for fall and winter.

Nina Ricci models have already started it, young society girls are quickly taking it up, and stars and starlets have rushed back to Paris from French Riviera vacations to get into the swim.

The new Caroline coiffure is fluffy, but not inflated. There's more hair, but less bulk.

The hair is parted at the side a la Caroline Kennedy with the ends turned softly upward and outward like the little Second Lady's. Added to this, there's a soft swatch of hair pulled forward and across to veil the forehead right down to the eyebrows.

BEWITCHING

"The effect is rather like Caroline when her hairbow has fallen off and those front hairs fringe her eyes so bewitchingly," explained Paris star Annie Girardot. "It's adorable with the natural pouting expression of the French."

By IRENE FERRIS

"It's practical and pretty," exclaimed Martine, mannequin-vedette at Nina Ricci. "What's especially wonderful is that you can wear it with hats. It hugs the head where your hat goes and does its flying below."

"The Caroline coiffure is my masterpiece, giving every woman her ideal look and every man his ideal woman," announced hairdresser Jacques Dessange. "It's a mixture of young innocence with the wisdom of the ages."

Beautician Isabelle Lancray pointed out that the new hair-do requires a new make-up that is tender, gentle and "shell-like."

"It must suggest rather than shout," she said. "It's the demure darling look, but there's a screen of mystery over the eyes. It leaves men confused."

And how are the confused men reacting?

JUST THEIR TYPE

"These new Caroline girls are just my type!" exclaimed society sportsman Louis Gatteschi. They're a happy combination of angel, cherub, minx and siren."

"The new Caroline is an infant with a lot of Eve about her," commented Yves Montand. "She's got a 4-year-old look with oh-la-la! such a beguiling touch of sophistication."

Even the children approve of the new coiffure.

"I like mama's new hair because it bounces when she walks," said Jean Luc Rouelle, 5-year-old son of ballet dancers Martine and Charles Rouelle. "Papa says it's epatant (terrific)."

Denise Ravel, the 17-year-old poetess, has already adopted it as a solution to super-intellectuality.

"Because I'm a deep thinker, I have a long, long forehead," she explained. "So I wear the Coiffure Caroline to hide it from the boys."

Yates are Welcomed Home

By KATHRYN GRAYBURN
Constitution Society Editor

A WARM WELCOME is being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Yates, who have just returned from residence in Atlanta after living in Darien, Conn.

The first "welcome home" party to honor the couple was given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Ben S. Barnes Jr., who entertained at a dinner at their home on Andover Drive. Mr. and Mrs. Barnes were introduced to each other by the Yateses.

The returnees have been with Mrs. Yates' mother, Mrs. James C. Malone, while their home on Stovall Boulevard was being redecorated. Mr. Yates is an executive with the L&N and Coast Line Railroads.

They have a host of friends here. Colorful umbrellas and white sand added to the beauty of the setting. Guests wore "Gay Nineties" bathing suits and merriment reigned when a barber shop quartet vocalized and a Can Can number was presented.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT BUNZEL have left for a vacation in Maine, after which they will attend the Berkshire Music Festival in Massachusetts.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN WADNER of Glendale, Calif., and children, Jack, Flewellyn, Susie and Bob arrived Friday to visit Mrs. Wadner's sister, Mrs. Lee Rogers and Mr. Rogers.

Saturday evening the visitors were honored at a dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. William Holland and Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Jones.

MOST ARRESTING SIGHT OF THE WEEK: Mrs. Myrt Powers of Buford, baseball expert famous for her appearances on the "564,000 Question," lunching at the Variety Club.

with penciled lines. Form a tiny pleat at each corner and stitch two loose ends together. Baste pocket to wrong side of front, matching the 1 1/2" line of pocket to bottom edge of front. Baste this one long pocket edge and two short edges to front, leaving other long edge free.

4. Finish top and two sides of flap and free pocket. Make a row of tiny back stitches on pencil lines with white silk thread. Then outline stitch over this row, working from left to right with thread above needle, overcasting stitches closely. Do the same to the front, catching in lace, front and pocket. Secure stitches when ending. Trim excess fabric off all edges right up to stitching. Wrap sachet tablet in cotton and insert in pocket. Turn flap over it to close.

Hanger Cover (Fig. 2): Wind satin ribbon around neck of hanger, tacking securely at tip and ending with a bow at base. Draw an outline of hanger. Extend sides down about 5 inches and draw a straight line across bottom edge. Cut two pieces of satin and two of scalloped lace. Stitch a narrow hem along bottom edge of satin pieces. With right sides together, stitch satin and lace together, leaving bottom edge free and a 2-inch opening at top for neck of hanger. Turn raw edges of opening under and hem. Either leave scalloped edge of lace free, or applique to satin following lace design.

1. The two linen pieces will be trimmed smaller, but must be larger when starting in order to work on easily. On the 5-inch square, lightly draw with a pencil a rectangle 2-1/4" x 1-1/2". Draw another line through the rectangle dividing it into a 1-1/2 inch square (the front) and a 3/4" x 1-1/2" rectangle (the flap). Mark the 5" x 4" piece the same way into a 1-1/2" x 1" rectangle (the back or pocket). These marks are your stitching guide lines.

2. Draw an initial or another design on right side of front. If you have a zigzag machine, use a small satin stitch. If done by hand, outline design with small running stitches, using embroidery thread for padding. Work over padding with embroidery thread, using a satin stitch. Keep the stitches even and close together. Make them gradually smaller at curves and points.

Fashion's Future Says Knits to You For Fall's Chill

By RAYMONDE ALEXANDER
Constitution Fashion Editor

It won't take a ouija board to tell you there's a knit in your future.

Almost every collection of American designers featured the knit fashion in one form or another.

One reason for the preponderance of knit fashions is that in recent seasons they have emerged from a style trend to an integral part of everyone's wardrobe.

They can be depended upon for adaptability, versatility, and packability.

And while American designers are now making the most of this wonderful concept of fashion, import knits have long been on the scene with their wonderful ways.

FIRST IN 1950

One such fashion house made its appearance first in the United States in 1950 on a very limited scale.

Since that time Mirsa of Italy has become synonymous with fashion flair in knits.

Brought to the attention of women here by Mr. Mel Posner, known to the fashion world as Mr. Mel, the Mirsa knitwear is actually fashioned by Marchessa Olga di Gresy in her home at Galliate, Italy.

2, 3-PIECE

Its name is derived from the first syllables of the names of her daughter and son, Mirella and Sandro.

The collection for this fall includes two and three-piece costumes with the typical continental touches that set it apart.

It will be shown by Mr. Mel in a special showing today that will be like having the original designer on hand.

AMERICAN WAY

Mr. Mel has worked with the Marchessa to develop the collection because his familiarity with the American way of dressing helps keep the fashions more attuned to the needs.

It is his custom to tour the South to discover this and he has pioneered the styling and development of such favorites as the cashmere coat and the use of leather in fashions.

Oftentimes his wife will accompany him on these special showings to serve as his model.

BODY-CONSCIOUS

Colors from the gray, brown and red families set the pace in the collection.

In the two-piece look will be the body-conscious brown combination of a slim skirt and a waist-level jacket.

The jacket is collared and cuffed with ombre shaded fringe threaded with gold.

In a contrasting theme is the gray slender skirt topped with a white easy jacket.

The jacket is collarless and contrasted with gray down the front and around the hem.

SOFT TOUCH

A soft touch is added through embroidering flowers on the jacket in blossom pink and foliage green.

Red comes three-piece in a skirt and button jacket and overblouse.

There is contrast in the stitch in the overblouse and suit as the overblouse takes on the smoothness of a tee shirt while the skirt and jacket show more texture.

The overblouse turtle collar is bulky knit and rings the collarless neckline of the jacket.

For shopping information, call JA. 2-5050, Ext. 394, or send a self-addressed post card to the Women's Department, The Atlanta Constitution.

Men's Group Sets Picnic Here Aug. 4

The Men's Garden Club's annual picnic has been planned for Friday, Aug. 4, from 5:30 until 9:30 p.m. at Hastings Garden Shopping Center at 2350 Cheshire Bridge Rd.

In addition to the party and its attendant festivities there will be a vegetable and flower show with entries from club members. Conrad Faust is chairman for the event.

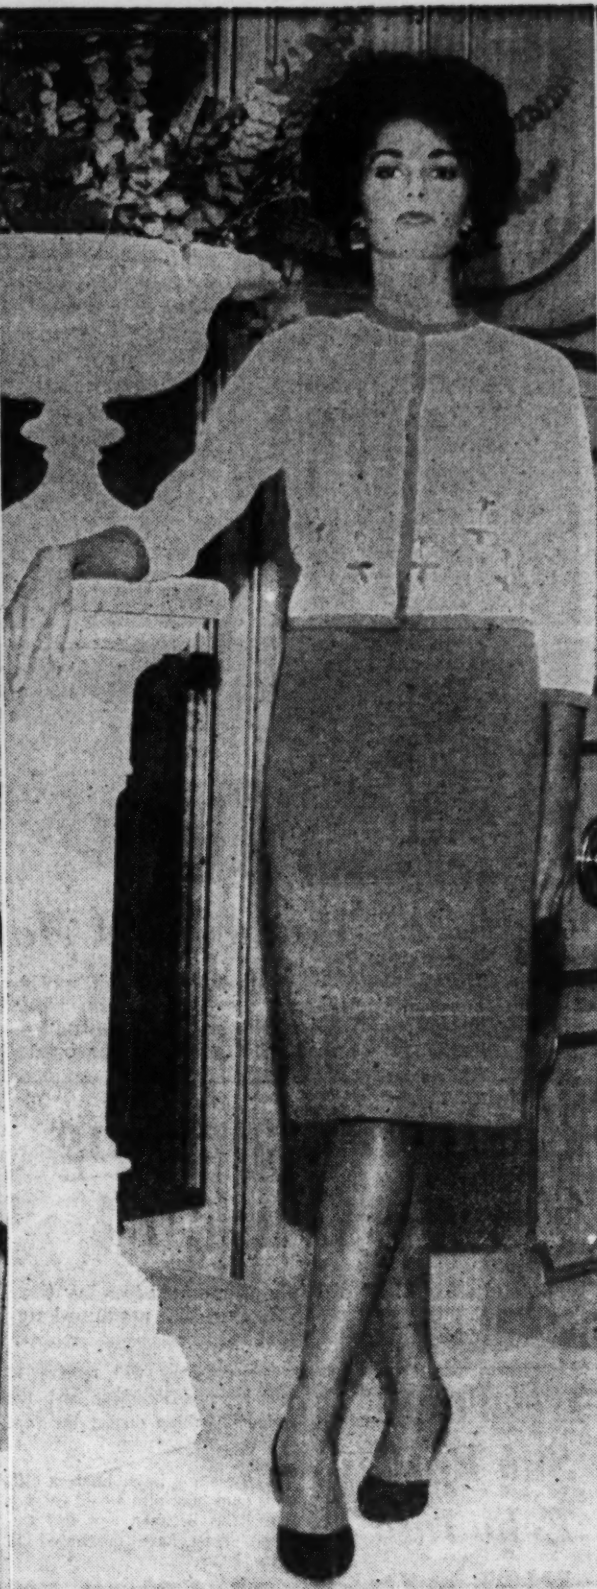

Awards will be made in the flower show in the following classes: roses, annuals, perennials, dahlias, gladiolus and potted plants.

The vegetable awards will be in classes for tomatoes, pod peppers, string beans, quart-string beans and quart okra.

In addition to Mr. Faust, other chairmen for the affair include, H. G. Hastings, George McClure, Robert Peek, Donald Hastings Jr., Allen Standard, Miller Thompson, Dr. L. N. Wise and Charles Hudson.

Atlantan Lives Her Title, She's a Pioneering Woman!

"Pioneering Spirit" the award said when Mrs. Walter B. (Emilie) Spivey was named Atlanta's Woman of the Year in Arts in 1958.

Mrs. Spivey is still pioneering and in a strange new field, Indian archeology.

The energetic Atlantan, now a Jonesboro resident, was a leading organist, pianist and choir director here for many years. Recently she has turned into an American Indian buff.

The new interest came with the development of an amusement park which she helps her dentist-husband operate near Jonesboro.

In its early stages as workmen were excavating the dam and lake, Indian artifacts kept getting in the way.

The usual arrowheads and tomahawks turned up. Then came bigger treasure — remnants of an Indian village carved out of an acre-wide slab of granite.

Soon they hit a stone sign post with Indian hieroglyphics explaining the popularity of the spot: "Good turkey hunting ground."

EXPERT HELP

Luckily Mrs. Spivey had expert help in interpreting the relics that workmen and picnickers kept bringing to her office at the lakeside.

Jake Freeman, a Spivey staff member who is part Indian, and John Smith, Henry County conservation agent and Indian scholar, came to the rescue.

They identified a chief's chair carved in the granite rock slab, an anvil for chipping arrowheads and a trough for panning gold.

The Upper Creek tribe, about 2,000 of them, were the last Indians to occupy the valley until they were driven out in 1836, she believes.

Mrs. Spivey admits she is fast becoming an arrowhead expert, learning to separate the bear-hunting arrows from the bird ones and the war arrows from the hunting ones.

SLOWED DOWN

Mrs. Spivey's archeological research has been slowed down by one problem. Much of the village work area with its built-in tools and furniture was flooded by the lake.

"All that history is seven feet under water," the enthusiastic matron sighs.

But with her woman's ingenuity, she is planning a solution to that hurdle — glass bottom boats so she and other Indian enthusiasts can look down on past history, at least.

In addition to her new hobby, she continues her music career as music director and organist at the Temple and she still gives occasional organ concerts.

Luckily, she can combine homemaking and office chores easily. Her handsome "country French" home is just a few feet from her office at Lake Spivey.

"I'm spreading myself too thin," the dynamic woman admits. "If I don't slow down I'll soon be a relic myself."

Atlantans To Attend Hiawassee's 1961 'Parade of Progress' Fair

The eleventh Georgia Mountain Fair will be held in Hiawassee Aug. 14-19 and as everyone knows it's chief charm lies in the fact that it has been held to the ideas of an old-fashioned traditional fair.

Hiawassee is located on U.S. Highway 76.

"A Parade of Progress" is the theme, but actually this hill country festival is the fruition of a century of progress in agriculture, in better roads and more conveniences.

26 COUNTIES

There will be exhibits from 26 counties. The displays will include work from the needle, the loom, the lathe, the garden and the forest. There will be craftsmanship and wildlife and a program each day to attract anyone with any taste.

Showing the romance of early days will be in the display of Indian relics including arrowheads of all sizes and types; Indian cooking utensils, corn mills, battle axes, blow guns and even adornments for the Indian maidens.

Opening Monday, the first official day's program will be Tuesday when there will be a flower show sponsored by the Hiawassee, Enotah and Blairsville Garden Clubs. It will continue through Thursday.

HOG SHOOTING

Wednesday, members of the Lions clubs from the area will gather and there will be searching parties for rocks and minerals. Residents and visitors will gather Thursday to celebrate Pioneer Day wearing centennial or Colonial costumes.

A livestock show is set for Friday. There is a double feature for Saturday beginning with a hog rifle shooting match and a fiddlers' convention.

Contestants in four age groups will compete for quarters of beef in the hog rifle shoot.

NEWS—FEATURES—VIEWS

Factory Sales Up; New Orders Steady

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Factory sales rose nearly 1 per cent in June and new orders held steady, the Commerce department reported Sunday.

The stability in new orders appeared favorable in light of a preliminary forecast two weeks ago of a 1 per cent drop in new orders to makers of durable goods.

Economists pay close attention to new orders because they are an advance indicator of future production and employment.

3 PER CENT HIGHER

The $32.2 billion in new orders for factory goods in June was 3 per cent higher than in June, 1960, and nearly 10 per cent above the recession low of last January.

Manufacturers' sales advanced 1 per cent from May to June, adjusted seasonally, with cars and industrial machinery leading the gain. Steel sales declined following strong spring advances. Elsewhere in the manufacturing field, changes were small.

INVENTORIES STEADY

Factory inventories held steady in June for the third month in a row. The department contrasted this with the $400 million inventory liquidation in the first three months of the year.

With production increasing, factories reported a decline in stocks of raw and semi-finished materials and a rise of goods-in-process.

Backlogs of unfilled orders remained roughly steady in June at $45.7 billion, about $500 million higher than in January but $2 billion below the mid-1960 level.

'62 Autos Are Boosting Steel Output

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The overall trend of steel demands is up as automakers prepare for initial runs of 1962 models and plants end vacations, Steel Magazine reported Monday.

The August shipments of steel for auto producers will be up slightly from July, reflecting the start of production on the new models. Only one major producer and a few scattered plants of another firm are still rolling out 1961 models.

The market's better tone also reflects improved sales of house hold appliances, Steel reported. Manufacturers of washers, ranges and refrigerators are recalling workers and stepping up production.

July's steel output will be about $1.1 million tons compared with $1.0 million tons in June.

Fidelity Assets Rise 5.04 Pct. Over 6 Months

Bankers Fidelity Insurance Co. of Atlanta has announced a 5.04 per cent increase in company assets during the first six months of 1961.

President Roy E. Smith said assets now stand at $2,321,051.42. The stockholder report revealed that reserves increased 7.43 per cent to $965,830 during the six-month period and the surplus account reached an all-time high of $710,072, or a 2.35 per cent increase.

Income for the first half of this year reached $600,240 and Smith reported the firm "now has an established income of over $1 million per year."

FULL OF LIFE

Sun Pushes Echo Into a Higher Orbit

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Echo I, the world's most empty satellite, is still full of surprises for scientists.

The 100-foot balloon launched last August and expected to last only a few weeks is still orbiting about 1,000 miles aloft. It is visible in the evening sky at this season over most of the United States. It is expected to stay aloft several more years.

The satellite is so big and so light (about 80 pounds) that the gentle pressure of sunlight has caused it to rise instead of fall. Sunlight pressure on the balloon is about equal to that exerted by a housefly in flight.

The Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory says that in recent weeks Echo I achieved almost a perfectly elliptical orbit, something previous satellites only attained in the last few days before they plunged into earth's atmosphere and burned.

The Atlanta Echo satellite timetable:

Georgian To Surrender In Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)—A Rome, Ga. pulpwood worker will be surrendered here Thursday, said Circuit Solicitor Emmett Perry, to answer assault with intent to kill, stemming from violence in Birmingham May 14.

Bobby Lee Cook, of Somerville, Ga., notified Sol. Perry that his client Herschel W. Acker, 30, would surrender to make $1,000 bond.

Acker's decision to surrender was made after Gov. Ernest Vandiver of Georgia granted the extradition request of Alabama Gov. John Patterson.

Identification of Acker as one of the white men involved in the Birmingham bus station violence was made during the extradition proceedings.

GEORGIA NEWS

Private Colleges Prodded

BRUNSWICK—The Chancellor of the University System of Georgia has challenged the state's private institutions of higher learning to find "greatly increased new income" as quickly as possible to meet forthcoming demands.

Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, addressing the Georgia Foundation for Independent Colleges at Jekyll Island Sunday night, said the state's private colleges and universities must expand to care for an additional 8,500 students by 1970 if they expect to continue teaching their present one-third proportion of Georgia students. Public institutions expect a more staggering 17,000 enrollment increase.

"But I believe the private schools face a more difficult problem of raising the greatly needed new funds," he told representatives of the privately controlled institutions. He termed the preservation of a strong force of independent institutions vital to the maintenance of high scholastic standards and academic freedom in the American democracy. In the nation as a whole, he said, private institutions teach approximately one-half of the college students. He pointed out that Georgia already is below that mark.

Dublin Man Killed, 2 Shot in Fracas

DUBLIN — A Negro man was shot to death in a fracas in which two other Negroes were wounded, the sheriff's office reported here Sunday.

Eugene O'Neil, according to officers, led the scene of the shooting, but later surrendered to officers. Albert Rozier, 22, was identified by the sheriff's office as the victim. J. C. Burrey and Julia Mae Dixon were wounded.

Youth Rally Draws 214 to Statesboro

2 Fayetteville Youths Injured As Car They Were Fixing Falls

Two Fayetteville youths were injured slightly Sunday when a car fell on them.

Jerry Albert Smallwood, 14, of Rte. 3, Fayetteville, and his brother-in-law, Johnny Gerald Adams, 19, of the same address, were treated at Grady Hospital for injuries they received when a car they were repairing fell on them.

Smallwood suffered minor injuries to his side and stomach and Adams received minor injuries to his back and side, records showed. They were released after treatment.

2 Georgians Killed On Road, 3 Drown

The death by drowning of a nine-year-old girl in a lake at Hard Labor Creek State Park brought to four the violent death toll in Georgia for the weekend. There were two highway deaths reported by the State Patrol, and a Columbus man was killed by a train.

In addition, a 10-year-old Rossville boy was drowned in Tennessee's Lake Chickamauga, and a 19-year-old Rome Negro was drowned in South Carolina.

Sandra Faye Whitehead, 9, of Farmington, was drowned Sunday in Lake Brantley, one of two lakes in the state park near Rutledge. It was the first drowning in the history of the park, officials said.

David Goddard, 10, Rossville, drowned in Lake Chickamauga in Tennessee while swimming. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goddard of Rossville.

John L. McDowell, the Rome youth, drowned while swimming in an irrigation pond in Spartanburg County, S.C.

Tommy Lee Henderson, 37, of Columbus, was killed early Saturday when he was struck by a Central of Georgia freight train in Columbus. Police said Henderson sat down on the tracks and refused to move.

The State Patrol said William D. Driffin, 27, of Bogart, died Saturday night when he was struck by a car at the Athens speedway on U.S. 78 between Athens and Bogart.

Police said Driffin was directing traffic at the speedway's parking lot. A speedway spokesman, however, said Driffin had not been employed to direct traffic.

The patrol early Sunday apprehended J. C. Brock of Nicholson. Officers said Brock was charged with hit-and-run driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

H. O. Crawford of Elberton, was killed in a head-on collision Saturday night two miles north of Elberton on Georgia 77. The patrol said Crawford, 38, was a passenger in one of the cars.

IN MEMORIAM
IN LOVING MEMORY of my beloved HUSBAND who passed away 1 year ago July 31, 1960.
Time may heal the broken heart,
But time can never stop the longing
For the loved one gone before.
Sadly missed by wife Pearl.

4 Atlanta Leaders Join Appeal Staff

Four Atlanta businessmen have joined the growing list of leaders for this fall's United Appeal for Community Chest-Red Cross.

They are Harry V. Ackerman, district manager, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc.; Allen S. Hardin, treasurer, Ira H. Hardin Co.; Joseph T. Kilpatrick, vice president, Carithers-Wallace-Courtenay, and Brannon B. Lesesne, secretary-treasurer-manager, H. M. Patterson & Son.

United Appeal co-general chairman W. Lee Burge, Wilton Lookey and Morton L. Weiss announced the appointments.

Ackerman will head the section responsible for contacting all firms and employees in the chemicals trade classification. He has served in numerous campaign posts for both the Community Chest and United Appeal for the past eight years.

FOR CONTRACTORS

Hardin will be responsible for seeking the support of all general contractors in the five-county area. He is a member of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, DeKalb County Chamber of Commerce, Committee of 100, a director of the Citizens Bank of Hapeville and the Security Federal Savings and Loan Association of Atlanta and an officer in the First Presbyterian Church Sunday School.

Kilpatrick has accepted chairmanship of the section that will contact all paper and office equipment firms in the Metropolitan Atlanta area. Kilpatrick has served as treasurer of the Northside Kiwanis Club; president of the Land O'Lake Civic Club and Atlanta Stationery Club, and governor, District 4, National Stationery and Office Equipment Association.

TO SEE MORTICIANS

Lesesne will head the section responsible for contacting all persons in the drug and morticians trade classification. He is a past president of the Georgia Funeral Directors Association, a former secretary of the National Selected Morticians and is director of the Rotary Club.

This fall's United Appeal drive, which will raise funds for 69 Community Chest agencies and 10 Red Cross services, will be conducted in all five counties in the Metropolitan Atlanta area, including Fulton, DeKalb, Cobb, Clayton and Gwinnett. The drive will begin in September.

Kennedy Invites Vinson's Boy Pal

(Copyright 1961 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—Ten-year-old Tillman Sneed, the adopted pal of Rep. Carl Vinson, of Milledgeville, was recently invited by President John F. Kennedy to "come to the White House and visit me."

Young Sneed is the son of C. T. Sneed, Vinson's administrative assistant.

The boy and "grandpa," who is chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, hesitated to disturb the President during these busy days. But the original invitation was followed up by a telephone call from a presidential aide, and the visit took place last week.

The President showed Tillman some of the White House mementoes then chatted with him about school and his favorite sports. "And then, after a while," Tillman later confided to a friend, "the President talked to grandpa about foreign affairs and all that jazz."

Meriwether Is City's 'Most Wanted Man'

Desperado Harold James (Jim) Meriwether Thursday has been listed as the Atlanta Police department's "Most Wanted Man" for the second time within a three-year period.

COPTER TALK

Tipsy Driver Dead as A Gunman

(Sgt. L. A. Pendergrass flies over Atlanta each day in the police helicopter observing and reporting on traffic.)

By SGT. L. A. PENDERGRASS
Every policeman knows that the vast majority of traffic violations are committed because of inattention or carelessness and that criminal intent is not present at all.

But a death or an injury or a badly damaged automobile is just as real whether criminal intent existed or not.

Our judges realize the same thing. And for that reason most first offenders are invited to attend a driver training school instead of being sentenced to pay a fine.

There is one traffic law that is broken deliberately. It is operating a vehicle while under the influence of intoxicants or drugs.

A drunk at the steering wheel of a high-powered automobile is potentially more dangerous than a criminal with a gun.

Meriwether was No. 1 on the 10 most wanted list published March 22, 1959. An escapee from the Whitfield County Prison at the time, he was arrested the same day the list was published.

Sentenced to life in prison and 20 years for robberies he committed while he was a fugitive, Meriwether and John W. Craft, 32, escaped July 2 from the Buford Prison. Craft was arrested Monday by FBI agents.

FBI SEEKS 2

Two of those listed on the Atlanta bulletin also are on the FBI's 10 most wanted list. They are John B. Everhart, 41, Negro, who escaped from Oglethorpe County Prison while serving a sentence for murder, and William Terry Nichols, 30, listed as wanted on robbery charges.

Everhart is No. 3 on the Atlanta bulletin and Nichols No. 6.

Only two of those on the original Atlanta list have avoided arrest. They are Everhart and Charlie Williams, 32, Negro, an escapee from Cobb County who police said is wanted for robbery, burglary and auto larceny.

Williams is No. 8 on the Atlanta bulletin.

Others listed are Jack Lee Ford, 21, listed as burglary and auto larceny, No. 2; Albert Thomas Jennings, 58, burglary, No. 4; Stanley John Kiamy, 49, parole violation and burglary, No. 5; Isadore Harris, 45, Negro, murder, No. 7; Howard Lee Jones,

James Meriwether John B. Everhart
Negro, 26, escapee from Worth County and burglary, No. 9, and Thomas Edward Robinson, 37, and his wife, Betty Jan, 22, fictitious checks, No. 10.

Sing-Alongs Scheduled by Harmonizers

Atlanta area music lovers will get a chance during the next five Monday nights to learn first-hand about barber-shop quartet harmony and about the efforts of a local organization to encourage it.

The organization is the Atlanta Peachtree Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc.

The chapter will participate on each of five Monday nights in community "sing-alongs" from 8:45 to 9:45 p.m. at the Lenox Square mall. Lyrics will be flashed on a screen.

The SPEBSQSA chapter also will give demonstrations of barber-shop harmonization. During the program Monday night the chapter chorus will demonstrate with "Cecilia."

AS I SEE IT

Bad Commercials Still Unpopular

By PAUL JONES

I haven't heard anyone take out after "those lousy commercials on television" lately.

Do you suppose viewers have tired of chiding the pitchmen who peddle everything from women's undergarments to depilatories?

Or is it possible that viewers are just muttering their dissatisfaction under their breath?

Regardless of what has happened I know viewers are unhappy about the TV sales talk. A survey (I don't know how the industry would live without them) has informed me this is so.

For instance televisioners are terribly displeased about the women's undergarments commercials. Don't ask me why.

Jones

ticularly unpopular — especially among women viewers. This particular category is possibly the most unpopular on TV.

I have never found the bra commercials revolting. As a matter of fact I always thought they were done in reasonably good taste.

The commercials I can't bear are the deodorant, drug, cosmetic, shampoo and hair preparation ads. They're awful.

It seems that my attitude about TV commercials conforms to that of the majority—except in the instance of the women's undergarments. Of course, I might have missed some of the lingere ads and am not fully qualified to take a stand on that issue.

The bra sales pitches are par-

BUT I AM aware of the awful drug and deodorant, and, oh, yes, the household soap and detergent pitches. They're too much.

In the head count 40.9 percent of those polled rated deodorant commercials as "poor." And a hefty 49.7 percent said they are only "fair." A paltry 2.9 percent rated them "good." Drugs and cosmetics were rated similarly.

This response to the survey no appreciable affect on sponsor questionnaire obviously will have Continued on Page 17, Column 1

GUINNESS IN 'LAVENDER HILL MOB'

JACK HAWKINS IN 'LEAGUE OF GENTLEMEN'

Under the Lights

England Fills Local Screens With Greatness

By STUART CULPEPPER

The lights spell it out on the marquees. Atlanta has been invaded by the British, and it's all in fun. At least six films from the Mother Country are due to open here starting this week, and five of them are a part of the "Film Festival of the Great and Near Great from Great Britain."

The sixth is on a single-run basis at the Peachtree Art Theater, and is a Jack Hawkins comedy-thriller called ironically "The League of Gentlemen." It opens Wednesday.

The "Gentlemen" involved are on the surface, smooth and nicey-nice, but beneath their exteriors lie flaws which for one reason or another have made them easily persuaded by Hawkins to venture forth into a daring bank robbery. They are an odd and amusing group: there is a preacher of sorts who sells dirty books on the sly; there is a homosexual; there is a broke gambler; there is a slot machine "fixer;" an embezzler; and there are also a few other assorted shady folks—the type who live next door, almost.

They all have one strong point in common. They were all officers in the British Army. That factor Hawkins uses to plan and execute a brilliant scheme to steal a million pounds from a bank in broad daylight. The entire operation is carried off in precise military tactics. Everything is cool. Everybody is rich.

Everybody is happy. And then . . .

The movie gets off the ground slowly, most of the fault lying in the necessity of introducing so many characters and their motivations for embarking on a new life of crime. Some of the motivations are not too clear, but then if the producers had taken any more time getting the thing under way, everybody would have been lined up around the popcorn stand and missed the action.

Finally the picture begins to build its suspense, and there is quite a bit of that. The movie becomes a very witty spintangler, full of action and the expectation of immediate upset in the robbery's plans.

The actors all do marvelous jobs, particularly Hawkins, Nigel Patrick and Roger Livesey. The film is in black and white photography, which adds to the starkness of the suspense and drama. And all the while Philip Green's martial soundtrack contributes a considerable amount of interest in its own right.

Just as things are really shaping up for a fantastically excellent movie, the telephone rings. The phone washes up a lot of things, including the rave reviews the movie almost got.

The Climax is stupid and entirely unlikely. At least ten different things could have happened at the end of the movie, and the makers chose the worst of the 10. The choice was a far cry from heights reached through most of the 115-minute film.

All in all though, "League of Gentlemen" is an interesting and entertaining film with fine acting, timing, music — and some excellent lines. Only the ending falls short of making the film another British masterpiece of suspense and comedy combined.

The Fine Arts Cinema has opened the "Festival" of English films, and every one is excellent!

The first film winds up its run Monday and it would be worthwhile to make a quick trip out for it. It's Alec Guinness' brilliant "The Ladykillers," and is one of the funniest films the actor has ever done. There is a lot of suspense in this technicolor comedy-drama.

The next movie on the list (it opens Tuesday at the Fine Arts) is one of the finest examples of the term "film success" that I know of.

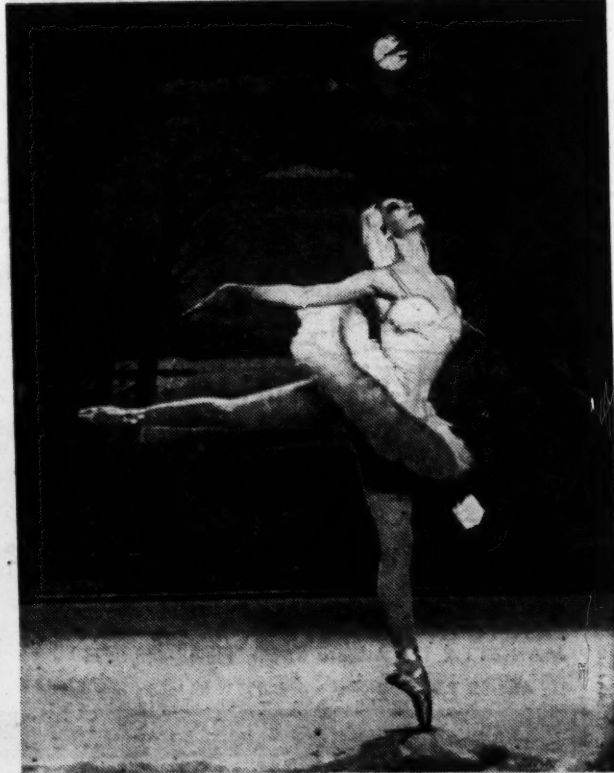

What are the elements of a film success?

General public acceptance . . . critic's raves . . . big box office . . . and perhaps most of all, the utter faultlessness in

FRANK WITTOW

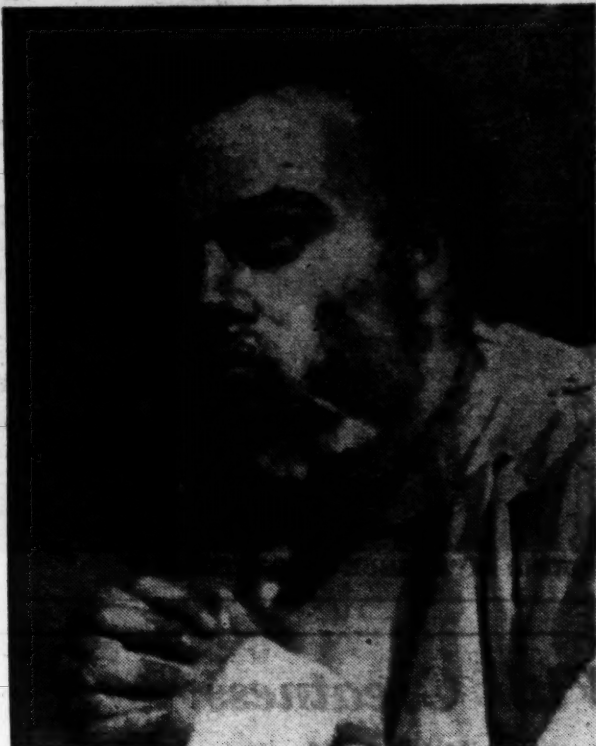

City Sees Face of Lear

By JEAN ROONEY
Two shaved heads were playing the Atlanta boards last week, setting the feminine theater goers palpitating. One was Renato Cibelli playing the bald but agile King of Siam. The other was Frank Wittow playing the old but still virile Lear, King of Britain.

Wittow shaves his hairline slightly as part of the transposition from his own 30 years to the aged Lear's four score plus.

THE FACE OF A KING

He adds a beard, not an exaggerated one but a simple one he could plausibly grow himself. He whitens his hair, of course, and plays deftly on make-up.

But the talented young actor and director of the Academy Theater uses the light touch in make-up to gain physical control of the role.

"I approach my face like I'm doing a charcoal study," Wittow explains.

He uses a light make-up base and relies heavily on theatrical liner, highlighting and shadow-

SHOW BUSINESS IS HER LIFE'S LOVE

By STAN JACKSON

"I love the live theater," she said.

"I adore performing for people . . . it's all one great big rehearsal for me."

Dossie Hollingsworth—the vivacious redhead who is starring in Tuesday's Theater Under the Stars opening of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes"—has no complaints about any part of her profession.

"My career in show business has been everything to me," she vowed. "I seek the good points but accept the bad points in this field. If you love something enough, you stick with it."

The same exciting warmth which appeals to her audiences remains a part of her when she is not performing. Her voice, which once successfully attempted opera, sounds every syllable.

She is somewhat restless and seeks diversion in her personal life.

"I'm crazy about crossword puzzles," she admits. "I enjoy cooking, especially international foods flavored with wine. But mainly I like to act in front of live people—to try and make them laugh, to see if I can offer them something genuine to laugh at."

Doris (Dossie) Hollingsworth began her career as a coloratura soprano who seemed destined to perform only the heavy works of operatic composers.

While on a talent search in Virginia, George Abbott heard Dossie sing and was so impressed with her vocal prowess that he invited her to New York to appear in one of his shows. She was 19 at the time.

"He plucked me out of my environment and at the same time ended my future in opera," she related. "I was cast as a comedienne. That started me in musical comedy."

Since then her flexible voice—which she describes as "loud!"—has been heard in a variety of roles ranging from Lorelei in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," to Reno Sweeney in "Anything Goes," Bobo in "Oh, Captain," Lalume in "Kismet," Ruth in "Plain and Fancy" and ous things in the world," she confessed. "I couldn't ask for a better part than that of Lorelei Lee. But such a character requires a lot of concentration and can be quite nerve-racking."

"If you miss your timing with a joke—with a single word in a joke—you ruin it. But I like the challenge and the enjoyment of comedy. Sometimes after a performance, though, I really feel sick—like a mule has kicked me in the stomach. Fifteen minutes later I'm fine again."

Her travel abroad has taken her to France, Germany, Italy, North Africa, Spain and many other countries.

"I like Spain best," she said with glee. "The art, the museums, the life, the people—I love it all."

"The people there are very poor," she noted. "But they are extremely honest—except for the gypsies. You've got to watch them!"

Since childhood, Dossie has been led in the direction of a musical career. She plays the piano, pipe organ, and even once tangled with a cello.

"I hated that thing," she laughingly admitted. "I wanted to play the violin, but the school orchestra needed a cello. I was framed into it."

"I was sort of trained for the theater. I was shy and stammering as a kid so I took ballet and voice lessons. I even enjoyed doing it. Then Mr. Abbott came along and started me on my way."

A dislike for performing on television and in night clubs remains a fixture with her.

"I can't stand performing into a camera," she said. "And night club audiences change so much from day to day that I can't keep up with their moods."

"I do know that I like almost everything about my career," Dossie Hollingsworth's career is her life; snuff out one, she seems to say, and the other is ended also.

"I know that I want to see and do and be everything before I die," she said in a somewhat melancholy, but anticipating, voice. "If I can do all of that, I will have accomplished thoroughly my life's ambition. . ."

ROMANOFF AND JULIET

Ustinov, Sandra Dee Click In New Comedy

By STUART CULPEPPER

Peter Ustinov is one of those rare actors who, no matter what he is saying or doing on the screen, has the ability to make you be extremely glad you are privileged to see him do it. In his new movie "Romanoff and Juliet," the pleasure is tripled because not only does he star in it, but he has also produced, directed, and written it, basing it on his hit play of the same name.

Co-starring with this master of urbane wit and flawless timing, are Sandra Dee, John Gavin and Akim Tamiroff. All of them are fine.

Sandra manages to constantly remain just about the cutest thing on the screen today (no matter what she is doing) since Lassie was a puppy and Margaret O'Brien wore pig-tails.

John Gavin seems to be steadily improving with each new picture, and if he is the worst member of the cast, he is still a long way from being rated "poor."

Akim Tamiroff is a very winning, though ornery, Russian ambassador, and he gives Ustinov a run for his money in their scenes together.

The color of the Universal-International film is beautiful, and the soundtrack by Mario Nascimbene is lush and sweet.

Ustinov created a new nation (Concordia) for this story, a nation conceived in love and laughter. He is the president of Concordia and when he abstains in a critical United Nations vote, both the U.S. and Russia send their diplomats after him to win him over.

The whole thing winds up with the wackiest twist to the old "shotgun wedding" story that you've ever seen.
This is excellent family fare.

Ustinov and Sandra are always fun!

Jones Spoofs European Travel On Hilarious Musical Tour

By THE TV SCOUT

BEST BET—9-9:30 (Ch. 5) The star of The Spike Jones Show presents "public service" feature, "Travel in Europe," and this feature is the reason TV Scout recommends the show. Spike discusses European signs which give directions to Americans ("Yankee, Go Home"), the penalties for breaking the law (a guillotine), the lowdown on how Italian, French and English women really look. Comedian Charlie Manna and singer-pianist Buddy Greco are guests. Charlie appears with Spike and Helen Grayco in a "Dance Partners" sketch that should make you smile.

7:30-8:30 (Ch. 2) — Both Canfield brothers appear in the repeat on The Americans, although Dick Davalos, as Jeff, has a bigger part than Darryl Hickman. The plot concerns a Confederate mission to sabotage a railroad bridge. The lone weapon to be used is a saw, and Jeff, because of his knowledge of the weapon, is chosen for the assignment. In the dark night a Northern sentry is wounded and left to die on the bridge. Jeff comes to realize, with growing horror, that his brother had the sentry duty on the bridge. Davalos gives a moving performance in this dramatic and suspenseful show.

8:30-9:30 (ABC) — A fairly tite plot on the Surfside 6 repeat. But an excellent performance by Constance Ford as a strong-willed mother pushing her unhappy child into a show business career nearly overcomes the intrigue tossed in to give our detective heroes something to do. Shirley Knight, as the unhappy young actress, is also good. Warner's thought so much of Miss Ford's work in this they signed her to appear in an upcoming movie.

9:30-10:30 (Ch. 11) — Tonight's repeat on Adventures in Paradise was written for Inger Stevens by producer William Froug. The script was held until she was available, and a top director, Robert Florey, was hired. The result is a slick, smooth and basically logical story. Miss Stevens plays a Swedish doctor who must fight native superstition on a small island.

10:30-11 (Ch. 5) — Brenner repeats fine episode. Rookie policeman Ernie Brenner (James Broderick) is forced to kill a kid who is about to knife another policeman.

Dog Days

With these summer dog days causing sweltering apathy toward anything so menial as getting up from in front of the television set, most people would love to do what ABC-TV's Rin-Tin-Tin is about to do here—take a flying leap into the pool. Then after a leisurely sweep or two around the pool, floating as much as possible, with his tail for balance, the canine hero of his own television series usually makes it back in time to see himself on the screen in his kennel. Sound fantastic? It probably is, but he's a smart mutt, and in "The Adventures of Rin-Tin-Tin" Monday and Friday at 5:30 p.m. on Channel 11, he does equally amazing feats of an almost human nature.

'Macbeth' Due Back

Viewers who missed the Hallmark Hall of Fame's two-hour, color production of "Macbeth," winner of five TV Academy Emmy Awards and other top honors, will have a second opportunity to see it when the distinguished television series opens its eleventh season over the NBC-TV network on Friday, Oct. 20 (8:30-10:30 p.m., EDT).

Tarawa!

The seething story of a battle for a tiny Pacific atoll, which has been called "the bloodiest encounter in Marine Corps history," will be recounted in "Tarawa!" on "The Twentieth Century" Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 5. This is a rebroadcast of the earlier successful run, and is filled with actual newsreel footage of the bloody battles.

Raffish gourmet from the nether world (Sid Caesar) returns to his sewer hideout after failing to capture the heart of a housewife whose devil's food cake recipe won a prize in "The Devil You Say" on the "General Electric Theater" Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channel 5. Host Ronald Reagan and Patricia Barry costar.

Shaw Comedy Airs Sunday

An adaptation of the first play of George Bernard Shaw's five-part "Back to Methuselah," a philosophical comedy about the need for humans to perfect themselves to avoid destruction, will be presented on "Look Up and Live" Sunday at 10:30 a.m. on Channel 5.

In the television adaptation, titled "Back to Methuselah," the Serpent instructs Adam and Eve on the meaning of love, jealousy, death, hope, killing and procreation—knowledge which reaches evil fruition in Cain. The play was adapted by Richard Siemanski from "In the Beginning," the first of Shaw's five plays presented as a unit under the title "Back to Methuselah."

Adam, as a young man, is played by Frederick Combs, and as an old man by William Hughes. Eve, as a young woman, is portrayed by Barbara Lord, and as an old woman by Michael Myers.

Look Out!

Martin Milner and George Maharis spring into action to save a man from a brutal beating in "Eleven the Hard Way," on Chevrolet's "Route 66" series Friday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 5. After many months on the road, working as shrimp fishermen, prospectors, lumberjacks, and anything else which is handy, the boys don't blink an eye at even the strangest job offers—at least not until the strangest of all this week.

'Cold Woman' Set Tuesday

Kim Hunter stars in the title role of "The Cold Woman," a "Purex Special" dramatic documentary on sexual frigidity in America, on Channel 2 Tuesday, 10 p.m. The broadcast will be the first nighttime repeat of this daytime special originally seen Oct. 14, 1960. Jack Klugman is featured in the role of the husband and Zina Bethune as the daughter.

"The Cold Woman" was written and produced by George Leferts. Pauline Frederick of NBC News serves as reporter for the program and interviews Dr. Lena Levine, psychiatrist and past president of the American Association of Marriage Counselors.

"The Cold Woman" tells the story of Leora Davis (Miss Hunter) whose second marriage is foundering, despite the love and concern of her husband, Charles (Klugman). Her attitude toward marriage and its physical aspects is not only poisoning her own life and that of her husband, but threatens the emotional balance of her teen-age daughter, Anne (Zina Bethune). Leora is shown that given time and counseling, her problem is amenable to solution.

Judy Conquered New York, Too

Judy Garland invaded Atlanta on a Thursday night last April—and 4,000 of her fans, gathered in the city auditorium to hear her, cheered themselves into exhaustion with shouts of "Bravo!" after every one of her 32 numbers.

But this wild reception was nothing, they say, compared to what happened when Judy sang at Carnegie Hall just 10 days later.

That sophisticated New York crowd, jammed into the hallowed concert hall, was on its feet before Judy picked up the microphone. Her first smile set off a storm of whistling and cheering and more of those screams of "Bravo!"

"She could probably have ended the concert right there and they still would be cheering," the staid New York Times reported. "The fact is that at least a half-dozen times more during the evening the standing ovation, plus the screaming, took place."

And this was no teen-age audience. Just as in Atlanta, the cheers came from people who'd left their teens behind 20 years ago.

BUT JUDY was tangled up with a thousand memories for these fans. As very young children, they'd heard Judy—herself very young—singing "Over the Rainbow" in the film Wizard of Oz. When they were old enough to woo and be wooed, at the start of World War II, they saw Judy wooed by Gene Kelly in the movie "For Me and My Gal."

And the way Judy and Gene sang the title song, I doubt that anyone will ever sing it better.

Both "For Me and My Gal" and "Over the Rainbow" are among the better than 30 tunes in Capitol's new two-record stereo album "Judy at Carnegie Hall," recorded on the spot that memorable April 23. For Judy's fans in their 30s and 40s the nostalgia may be almost more than they can stand.

They'll not forget those melodies ever: "The Trolley Song" and "When You're Smiling" and "Come Rain or Come Shine" and "You Made Me Love You" and "After You've Gone" and "Zing! Went the Strings of My Heart."

Together the tunes are almost a history of show business as written during the past quarter century by that little girl born Frances Gumm 38 years ago to a family from Murfreesboro, Tenn.—GEORGE GREIFF.

Worth Knowing

A student gave us some interesting comparisons between the United States, Canada and the Soviet Union: As of 1958, the USSR had a population of 210,000,000 while the U.S. and Canada had 192,648,000. They have about 8,600,000 square miles of land area. The U.S. has 3,545,791 square miles, and Canada has 3,562,857 square miles.

By way of visualization of the difference in size, within the Soviet Union is room for all of the U.S., Alaska, Canada, and Mexico, but vast areas are too cold, or too dry, or too wet, or too infertile, or too mountainous, or too inaccessible, or too something else. Although they are virtually landlocked, they have the longest coastline of any country, but also the most useless. Frozen seas bar access for most of the year.

The USSR has abundant resources within their own borders; they are about the only country where a self-sufficient national economy is almost feasible. Their geography can be better compared to Canada than to the U.S., because almost all of the Soviet Union lies north of the U.S.-Canadian border. Their southern-most area in middle Asia, can be compared to conditions and climate in Nebraska.

There is much that is similar in such a comparison, but it is like trying to learn the difference between two similar automobiles just by looking at them. It can't be done ... there are too many hidden factors, and for the truth about the unseen conditions, you must depend upon the dealer. For any comparison and any recommendation, you can depend upon us to serve you as we would want to be served.

NIGHT SCENE

Trio Packs Domino With Fun

Chick Hedrick is packing folks in down at the Domino, and there is a good reason for the crowd. Jerry Murad's "Harmonicals" are stomping, wailing, and waltzing their three harmonicas for three long shows a night, and the crowds love it.

Talk about rapport... Murad rapsports the hell out of just about everybody in the house every night. The crowds sing, stomp, clap, snap their fingers, hum, and whistle during the encores when Jerry takes them by the ears and conducts the best darned "Sing-a-Long" since Mitch Miller. In fact, for my money, it's even better than the bearded song-leader's long-famed performances.

The biggest seller for the Harmonicals since they first got together 16 highly successful years ago has been "Peg O' My Heart," and it's going just as strong today as ever. The song is used as the title piece for the latest album released by the group, and it's backed by some of their finest renditions.

Columbia Records has just signed the trio for a new contract and this album is the first to be released through that outlet. The record is selling well, and includes such numbers as "Sabre Dance" and "Mala-guena," as well as the beautiful old standards. The recording is highly recommended both as an introduction to the group and as an encore after seeing them at the Domino. They will be around for one more week.

Actually, the show at the Domino is really a triple-threat program right now. Not only does Chick have the Harmonicals pulling people in, but Patti eats pulling people in, but there is a new comic by the name of Wally Weston.

Weston is a deadpan, gravel-voiced man of nondescript looks and undetermined age. One thing is for sure though, his wit is razor sharp and most of the jokes are new. This is the best comic M.C. in the Atlanta clubs right now. He too will remain at the Domino for another week.

Finally at the Domino there is Patti White, the gal of the beautiful body, air of charm and tight dress full of tricks. The ex-school teacher may not use all of her "school" props to the extent of their possibilities, and she may not be the best dancer around, but she's loaded with charm... and things.

Wrapping up for the week: Sammy Duncan, who holds greatness when he holds a horn, is back down-under with his cornet at Hank and Jerry's Hideaway. With him are the original Dixieland Jazz Band All-Stars featuring Ray Thomas, trombone; Mike Shapiro, Clarinet; Killer Merck, piano; Peanuts Fitch, bass and banjo; and Spider Ridgeway, drums.

The Japanese answer to Ertha Kitt returns to the Zebra Lounge this week with a new co-hort in music. She is the lovely SaChiko, and co-hort is Larry Williams, a pianist and vocalist also.

The Bayou is rocking to a fantastic limbo outfit that you've got to see to believe.

Susan Will Not Move

By BETTY CARROLLTON

"Moving to Alabama?" echoed the beautiful redhead. "Oh, no. Not us. We're Georgians!"

Mr. and Mrs. Eaton Chalkley—she's known in Hollywood as actress Susan Hayward of course—were quick to quell the rumor that their recent purchase of an Alabama ranch means a move from their Carrolton estate.

"It's always funny to us how those things get started," mused

Hayward

Mr. Chalkley at the Atlanta airport, waiting to begin the first lap of a family tour of Europe.

"Since I bought that land, someone got the word out that we're going to start a production company there. I've had stacks of letters from people of all ages. Most of them asking for a job."

The Chalkleys ARE on the move though. And for Susan, it's a combination of business and pleasure. Next month, she'll begin filming a movie in Europe, tentatively titled, "To Thank a Fool." Before that, however, the actress and her husband will introduce Susan's 15-year-old twin sons, Gregory and Timothy, to the sights of Ireland, London, Paris, Rome and Berlin.

"The boys want to get a close-up look at Brigitte Bardot," Susan said with a laugh. "This is their first trip to Europe. We're all looking forward to traveling together."

Mrs. Chalkley added that she and her husband are not "quite sure" just when they'll return to Georgia, but the boys will be back in September.

"Tim and Greg will have to get back in time for school," Susan pointed out. "And they'll be here for opening day at GMA."

The shapely actress—who began her trip in a white linen suit—is particularly anxious to visit Copenhagen. Her husband, however, is especially looking forward to their stay in Berlin.

"Wherever we go," Susan declared, "we know it'll be nice to get back home. And I do mean Georgia!"

Live TV Trend Under Way Again

attitude. A similar survey was made two years ago and, at that time, deodorants, cosmetics, household detergents and women's undergarments were the most unpopular categories.

All of this might indicate that surveys don't mean a thing. Sponsors obviously don't give a hoot whether their ad copy irritates viewers or not.

ACTUALLY THIS is not the case at all.

Industries are finding that the hard sell, the taped commercial, the well-rehearsed pitch in which a polished, handsome young fellow attempts to generate enthusiasm for a product by engaging in meaningless double-talk is not getting through to the customer.

Sullivan

Viewers shouldn't expect a radical change in television advertising within the next few months but the time is coming when the industry will revert to the "personal sell" in which the star, or host of the show will deliver the spiel.

This might come when TV goes back to "live" broadcasting. A trend in that direction is developing now. The industry's great strength lines in the "live" format as I have maintained for a long time. And "live" commercials, delivered by such personalities as Arthur Godfrey, Dinah Shore, Ed Sullivan, Gary Moore have more impact than those which are read off an idiot board by a former radio announcer.

THE TREND TOWARD "live" TV was accentuated by the recent popularity of the news and public affairs program format which has an immediacy.

In looking over the entire television schedule it is apparent that the "live" shows—Ed Sullivan, Perry Como, What's My Line, I've Got a Secret, Fight of the Week, the U. S. Steel Hour, Red Skelton, Garry Moore, Lawrence Welk, To Tell the Truth—have had the greatest staying power of any shows on the air.

The reason for this is obvious.

A "live" show enables viewers to see an event at the moment it is happening. Viewers look for the unexpected. Looking for the unexpected viewers are apt to be more attentive.

Possibly the real reason I haven't heard anybody beefing about "those lousy commercials on television" is that nobody has been paying them any heed.

Do you suppose that is the answer?

human emotions involved. Also photography, music, acting, directing, casting, writing, and a thousand other items go into the over-all production for consideration. All of these things are involved in a movie being a film success, and if the movie is rich in these things—then we have a classic on our hands.

These are films that will be shown over and over again and will over and over again delight the audiences who see them. Some of them might have even been shown on television for the late, late addicts. Yet, they will still enchant and enthrall those who see them again in the movie house.

The second in the series is the best of the type just described. It is the lovely ballet-drama fantasy, "The Red Shoes."

When first issued it garnered at least three Academy Awards, plus rave reviews from every critic who saw it, including this one. The film runs a little over two hours and is enchanting all the way. This is probably the finest ballet film ever brought to the screen.

Starring in "Red Shoes" are Moira Shearer, Marius Goring and Anton Walbrook. Don't miss it!

THE THIRD MOVIE in the series opens Aug. 6, and is another rib-splitting English satire starring Alec Guinness, Stanley Holloway (of "My Fair Lady" fame), and John Gregson. It is "Lavender Hill Mob." Whacky and impious, the laughs run from titters to belly-strainers, from beginning to end.

The fourth movie of the Festival is another award winner. "Genevieve" is the title, and the technicolor comedy opens Aug. 9.

scheduled for the Festival opens Aug. 13, and is another comedy classic starring Alec Guinness, Dennis Price and Valerie Hobson. It's "Kind Hearts and Coronets," a film in which Guinness, to everyone's complete delight, plays eight different characters. It is full of a wonderful whimsy and disrespect for many things so sacredly considered "wonderful" to the very, very British.

Wittow Not Like Welles

ing his face to add years and character lines.

When he proclaims "Yes, every inch a King," the audience believes him. But make-up is a minor part of his success.

Whittow, who is producing this summer's first Shakespeare Festival along with playing probably the hardest role, reports no single scene is more difficult than the next in the story of the majestic monarch betrayed by his daughters.

The challenge is sustaining tension almost every stage minute of the three and a half hour production.

"The mad scene seems to fall in place easiest," he feels.

With a Northwestern and Columbia University drama background plus New York, Chicago and Ohio acting experience, Wittow considers Lear by far his most demanding role.

The numbers of tensions and pressures, climax on climax, pose the special challenge, he explains.

Willie Loman in "Death of a Salesman" has almost as much pressure, he recalls, but not quite.

Surprisingly, Wittow has never seen a live production of "King Lear" though he has played a good bit of Shakespeare in the past.

"I don't feel I've conquered it. I'm not doing what I want with Lear yet," he says.

"I am aware how much needs to be done."

He changes the role, develops it each time he plays. And productions will continue through Aug. 13, alternating with "Richard II" and "As You Like It."

He doesn't mind Shakespeare buffs comparing his portrayal to past greats like Laughton, Calhern, Gilgud or even Olivier. But he hopes people will quit the Frank Wittow-Orson Welles comparison test.

"I just look like him. There the comparison stops," the young Lear declaims.
